Council approval needed

Sunset Center lot could be in place by June

By NANCY HILLS

A PAY-FOR-PARKING lot at the north lot at Sunset Center could be on its way by June if the Carmel City Council gives the go-ahead to pave the dirt parking area.

At the behest of Councilman Bob Fischer,

'This is a project that has been before the public many times. They (planning commissioners), were supposed to just look at the EIR, not pass judgment on the project.'

— Bob Fischer

the environmental impact report on the project has been removed from consideration by the planning commission and put on the council's upcoming agenda.

Certification of the EIR clears the way for final approval of the contract with Pansini Corp. to develop the pay-for-parking lot. Parking is currently free at the lot, which is not striped.

Both the EIR and final approval of the contract are on the council's agenda for its meeting at 4 p.m., Tuesday, March 7 in Carpenter Hall in Sunset Center.

Fischer asked that the EIR be removed from planning commission consideration after the commissioners refused to certify the document at its Feb. 22 meeting.

At that meeting, opposition to the project and its aesthetics were voiced primarily by commission chairman Olof Dahlstrand and commissioner Fred Keeble.

The planning commissioners' objections focused on what they stated were potential impacts to the surrounding neighborhood when people now parking free move on to surrounding streets and that paved parking lots are not in keeping with Carmel's character.

According to the EIR, the parking patterns will probably remain unchanged because of the number of cars observed looking for parking in the area guarantee the lot will be filled and that need for all-day spaces and hourly spaces in the area is in the same ratio as proposed for the paved lot.

Having the EIR come back to the planning commission could have delayed the project's completion until after the busy summer season.

That was unacceptable to Fischer, who wants the work completed by June 1 and ready for operation.

He added, however, that he would like to see and take into consideration the planning commission's comments, but from what he has heard, those concerns have been previously aired.

"This is a project that has been before the public many times," Fischer said. "They were supposed to just look at the EIR, not pass judgment on the project."

He added that they "probably misunderstood the council's direction" to them.

Fischer added that he was interested in a residential parking sticker program for the surrounding neighborhood that would allow only residents to park on the streets around there.

Other councilmembers have expressed the same interest.

According to a report to the city from Pansini Corp., the company selected by the city, the lot will provide 68 monthly parking spaces at $30 a month and 67 hourly parking spaces at $1.50 an hour.

Pansini will pay the construction costs and operate the lot.

The paving project also includes landscaping with trees and native vegetation.

People with tickets for an evening event at Sunset Center will park free.

According to the contract's provisions the city will receive a minimum of $2,000 a month from Pansini or 22 percent of the gross profits, whichever is greater.

THIS PROPOSAL has been bandied about for years and was revived during the April 1988 election by former mayoral candidate Clayton Anderson.

It is just one of a plethora of theories and proposed parking projects, including a multi-level garage at the same site.

An EIR on the garage project is in process and is due out later this year. Construction of a garage could be several years away.

If the city wishes to maintain ownership of the garage, then construction of a garage at that site will have to wait until at least the debt on the new Harrison Memorial Library Park Branch building is paid off in 1992.

Contractor Alan Williams, speaking as chairman of the city's parking committee, along with other members of the parking committee, have asked the council to delay a decision on the paving of the lot until a complete parking management plan is completed. The committee is working on developing information and a parking plan for the entire city.

However, proponents of paving, including Fischer, believe that changing the lot from free to paid will be a good test for the multi-level garage, which will also be a paid lot.

Dahlstrand, commenting on the removal of the EIR from the planning commission's review said, "I guess they can do it. They have the power."

Dahlstrand said that the planning commission "is a little concerned with the aesthetics

'The very thought of planting trees in a place that is a temporary parking lot makes me think it is, well, devious, let's face it. That's being honest with what they are saying.'

— Mary Ellen Hicks

and some commissioners are concerned that it is going to throw all-day parkers into the residential district."

He said that it is a "gut feeling" of the commissioners that the impacts would be greater than expressed in the EIR.

The report states that surveys of parking patterns in the lot on Dec. 26 and Dec. 29 show that people parking in the lot was about evenly divided between all-day parkers and hourly parkers.

To ameliorate all-day parkers intruding further into the surrounding neighborhood, both the EIR and Fischer have suggested changing parking on Eighth Street into all-day parking.

Another issue was planting trees in the lot, an indication to some that it is a permanent fixture rather than a temporary measure until a garage is built.

At the Feb. 22 planning commission meeting, Mary Ellen Hicks, wife of planning commissioner Ed Hicks, said she believed that calling the project temporary was "devious."

"The very thought of planting trees in a place that is a temporary parking lot makes me think it is, well, devious, let's face it. That's being honest with what they are saying," Hicks said.

Ed Hicks has been strongly in favor of the multi-level garage project at Sunset Center and is opposed to paving the north lot.

Other proponents of the proposed garage have expressed the fear that if the lot is a failure, it will be used as an example against the garage.

School officials hope for relief at polls March 7

By DAVID LELAND

CARMEL UNIFIED School District officials are gearing up for next Tuesday's special election, where a parcel tax measure, if approved, could spell relief for the district's run-down schools and equipment.

Known formally as Measure A, the ballot measure calls for each parcel within the district to be levied with an annual tax of $80 for the next four years.

CUSD has estimated that the measure would generate about $880,000 between March 8, 1989 and March 7, 1993.

If passed, the money will be used solely for capital improvements, of which the list is quite extensive.

Among items in disrepair are: buildings in need of structural repair and painting, older buildings containing potentially harmful levels of asbestos which must be removed, walkways with dangerous cracks and eruptions caused by tree roots, and perhaps most importantly, a fleet of school buses that have travelled in excess of 400,000 miles each.

CUSD Supt. Bob Infelise and a volunteer group of school administrators and parents have spent the past several months taking their case to residents and service clubs.

"In all cases we received a positive response," Infelise said. "In some cases we received an outright endorsement."

But with a two-thirds majority needed for adoption, Infelise is cautious about passage.

"I feel good because so many parts of the community have expressed interest," he said. "But with the need to get a two-thirds vote, I don't feel cocky."

There are 19,000 residents within the boundaries of the CUSD and the county registrar of voters is forecasting a 30-percent turnout for the March 7 election. That translates into about 3,500 voters going to the polls, with roughly 2,300 needed for adoption.

The reason for the current problem is simple: changes in school funding brought about by Proposition 13 and a state Supreme Court decision, have reduced the amount of funding to schools, and forced the school board to direct finances to the district's instructional program rather than to capital improvements.

AFTER A similar parcel tax was defeated by Carmel voters several years ago, district officials made an all-out effort to solve the capital-improvement dilemma by means other than a tax.

Among the programs utilized to improve aging buildings and buses, the district:

• Sought refuge in the state's Deferred Maintenance Program, which for a number of years applied matching funds for major repairs and replacement projects.

The state's contribution has been dwindling during the past two years and now amounts to only $40,000 annually.

• Applied to the state School Bus Replacement Program for the past three years. Five of the district's 16 buses are now more than 20 years old — applications have not been approved.

• Made a concerted effort between 1983-85 to market three unused school sites and Carmelo School.

The district is currently attempting to sell one of the sites, lease another and trade the third site for a future school in the Cachagua area.

A citizens committee has recommended that any proceeds from the lease or sale of those properties be invested and the interest used specifically for facility maintenance and equipment replacement.

• Prepared and submitted a detailed application for state financial aid to abate asbestos-containing material in district schools.

The application is still pending and there is a possibility that some funding will be received. However, if the total project is approved, the district must still provide a share of the estimated $900,000 cost.

THE DISTRICT has also been unable to utilize any money garnered from the state lottery toward capital improvements.

During 1987-88, the district received $222,786 for its share of the lottery, or 2.4 percent of its total budget.

School officials point out that lottery money is intended to augment instructional programs, such as adding to the library collection, providing for staff training and purchasing new science equipment.

It was not intended for asbestos abatement, reroofing or other maintenance needs.

Also, Proposition 98, which was passed by voters last November, will not significantly benefit Carmel schools because most of its income comes from local sources and the thrust of Proposition 98 is to prevent erosion of state revenues.

If Measure A does not pass, Infelise said the capital improvements must still be made.

"There will come a time when it can't wait and we will have to take money out of the operational budget," he said.

That, he said, could mean teacher layoffs and no salary raises.

Last wild space

Dear Editor:

Whether the people of Carmel and environs know it or not they have in their very back yard a natural treasure, a wildlife habitat of exquisite beauty, accessible to children and adults alike who love and want to know better their place and its inherent song of life.

Hawks, owls, rabbits, raccoons, quail, deer, a rich variety of birds, wildflowers, including the endangered Hickman's Onion all live here. And the trees! — 10,000 of them of all ages, including enormous mature Monterey pines, majestic oaks that were here long before we ever came. Probably 250 years old, huge willows, allowed to grow to maturity in the rich wetland soil, and redwoods.

And then the other species of shrubs and plants that grow and provide living space and food to the insects and birds and animals — wild currants, coffeeberry, thimbleberry, horsetail, with its feathery green foliage gracing the wet earth that it loves, baccharis, hemlock, and so many wildflowers. The peace and quiet, the wildness of this place is a meditation.

And it is called Hatton Canyon. For years it has been designated as a throwaway place, a mere corridor for a road, a freeway. It has been abused and used as a dump site, but it remains magical despite the contempt that has been heaped upon it.

Now, you might ask, why should I care about a place I don't see? Well, aside from its intrinsic value as a beautiful and complex system thousands of years in the making, aside from the fact that it is someone's home, namely all of the above, quail, birds, rabbits, coons, deer, etc., it is an important symbol, a challenge and an opportunity. It is the last wild space in our sphere of influence.

We see the very fabric of the ground of our being, the Earth, eroded, poisoned, destroyed every day by man's self-centered activities — animals and plants becoming extinct, ancient natural habitats obliterated in the wink of an eye. Now the ozone that shields and protects all living things from harmful ultra-violet rays is being ripped apart, the atmosphere which regulates the very weather that controls all life on earth is heating up, with destructive consequences, as a direct result of our thoughtless and reckless use of natural resources, and the destruction of forests.

If our children and their children and their children are to inherit a livable earth, each of us must begin to examine our individual attitudes and actions, starting in our own back yard. We must educate ourselves and our children to love and respect the earth, our fragile complex home, to walk softly upon it.

Children are intuitively connected to the earth, they find magic everywhere in nature, in the smallest insect and leaf. Hatton Canyon is an educational treasure trove for our children and for us. It is a source of connection in a spiritual sense to a lost part of ourselves — lost in our materialistic and artificial life style. It is close, and it is rich with all the magic of nature's variety.

Will we save this treasure for the wildlife and the children? Will we live up to our reputation as a community that cares about preserving the environment? Is there substance beneath the words?

Hatton Canyon is a symbol, a challenge, an opportunity. Will we rise to the challenge or will we lose this opportunity and destroy forever this peaceful, wild remnant of our natural heritage by allowing it to become a throughway for our "iron wombs?" I call on educators, politicians, and residents to think about this carefully, to walk through the canyon, and quietly contemplate the past, the present, the future, and their own personal responsibility.

Yes on 'A'

Dear Editor:

On March 7, the voters of the Carmel Unified School District will have an opportunity to provide the district with funds to pay for sorely needed new buses, removal of potentially dangerous asbestos in many classrooms and a number of improvements repairs to buildings throughout the district.

As chairman of the "Citizens for Carmel Schools" committee, I have had an opportunity to witness first-hand the capital improvements that are obviously needed. I believe as many others do that it is imperative to vote "yes" on Measure A on March 7. The funds are essential to the future of the district. The school district is now at a point where these capital needs can no longer be deferred. Inflation as well as costly mandated programs from the state have left the district unable to set aside funds to adequately maintain its properties and equipment.

The Carmel Unified School District board unanimously accepted our committee's recommendation to seek financial resources above and beyond the general fund to provide for these improvements.

Prior to this action by the board, our 30-member Citizens Committee considered and validated the needs of the district. We reviewed funding options and then voted unanimously to recommend that the board call for a special purpose tax election.

Because of Proposition 13 this special purpose tax is the only way the Carmel school district can raise funds locally. I hope the voters understand this, realize the legitimate need underlying this request and vote "yes" on Measure A.

Charges from afar

Dear Editor:

We couldn't help but take note of the letter in the Feb. 9 Pine Cone in which James R. Genone quoted Ticien Carlson who apparently has recently written in her column: "The City of Carmel is hardly swimming with teens at night. In fact, you may be hard pressed to find more than a few kids on the streets of Carmel at 10 o'clock on any given night."

Maybe she better wake up and smell the burning pot. One reason could be that they are over here in San Juan Bautista vandalizing our cemetery. According to the reports, Friday night, Feb. 10 these ghoulish young people were attempting to uncover a fresh grave. They wanted the body! At least, that's what the newspapers say.

The reports say that they gave up trying to dig up the fresh grave. But they did take the headstones "from the graves of two infants who died in 1914."

The evidence indicates that these kids are practicing witchcraft. Our police department, Chief Russell and officer Allison handled this outrage efficiently, but, let's face, you people in Carmel and Monterey

EDITORIAL

'Yes' on Measure A

SELDOM ARE taxpayers given the opportunity to say exactly where their hard-earned money is going to be spent. A rare chance will present itself March 7 when residents go to the polls to vote on Measure A.

Measure A is an unavoidable effort by the Carmel Unified School District to make a number of much-needed capital improvements to its aging school sites and to replace several worn-out buses. Five of the district's buses are more than 20 years old and have in excess of 400,000 miles on them.

Measure A is incredibly simple in its intent: each parcel in the school district will be taxed $80 annually for a maximum of four years. CUSD officials say such a tax will raise about $880,000 for the improvements.

Sound like a simple and effective way to solve the district's problem? It is.

Even the argument that Measure A is unfair because it taxes each parcel the same amount no matter how large or what the property is used for pales upon closer examination.

First, the law — under the provisions of Proposition 13 — prohibits ad valorem taxation, or taxes based on the value of a property. That in itself limits the district's options for raising revenue.

Moreover, CUSD officials are asking for the bare minimum in the amount of tax levied on each parcel. And even if adopted the district will have to continue to seek matching state funds to aid them in ridding classrooms of potentially harmful amounts of asbestos.

The CUSD is also seeking state funding to help purchase new buses. Each day one of the aging buses makes the trek from Carmel Middle School down Highway 1 to Big Sur and back, twice a day. In the best of conditions, the highway can be difficult to navigate, an cient buses make that task more hazardous.

Some opponents of the tax claim that the CUSD should have followed the example of the Elk Grove school district (near Sacramento), in which a complicated five-point plan was instituted.

First of all, the CUSD is not Elk Grove, the demographics, geography and needs are different. Secondly, the district wanted a simple, easy-to-understand measure to ensure approval, not a confusing multi-point measure that people would tend to reject merely because of its complexities and that would necessitate the spending of even more funds just to administer and enforce.

Still not convinced? Look at it like this: the monthly bill for each parcel owner under Measure A is only about $7, the price of a first-run movie and a box of Junior Mints.

That seems like a small amount to pay for the health and welfare of our children — both today's students and those in the future.

Most importantly, the district's capital improvement woes will not simply go away if the parcel tax fails. The repairs will still need to take place, but the brunt of the burden will likely be passed onto the teachers as money is taken from the CUSD's operational budget.

That means the possibility of teacher layoffs and salary freezes.

The Pine Cone believes that Measure A presents the most equitable option for maintaining the high standards that CUSD has set and that we expect of them. There's no reason the buildings and buses should not equal the excellent instruction and administration that currently exists in the district.

We strongly urge a "Yes" vote on Measure A.

While The Pine Cone was led to believe that the Carmel City Council endorsed such a proposal, quite the contrary is true.

The city does not endorse the idea of a city flag and has been attempting to discourage any further competition for a design, according to Carmel Mayor Jean Grace.

While such an idea may appeal to the business community for marketing reasons, Grace said residents may have a different reaction.

"The residents are going to think the city wants an official flag so they can tout it all over the world," she said.

She added that if the city council decides it wants a city flag, they will hold discussions and public hearings on the issue.

Libraries get temporary reprieve from supes

By DAVID LELAND

SUPERVISORS THIS week delayed any long-term solution to the shortage of county library funding, but allowed contractual payments to the Carmel library through 1991.

Last December, the county librarian recommended that the Monterey County

'We're very happy that it's been continued, (but) I think it's unfortunate that the real issue has been obscured.'

— Margaret Pelikan
— Harrison Library

Board of Supervisors cancel the remaining two years on its contracts with libraries in Carmel, Pacific Grove, Monterey and Salinas, citing that other areas of the county's library system were suffering for lack of money.

The county currently pays $471,251 to the four cities, which is about 17 percent of the county's library budget. This year Harrison Memorial Library received $92,836, or about 21 percent of its budget.

The good news is the contract will run its course; the downside is that funding will be frozen at its current level minus the amount that the board chipped in this year, or a reduction of 17 percent across the board to the four cities.

For Carmel, that means a loss of about $5,000 for each of the next two years, that comes on the heels of a $25,000 cutback this year in county funding.

"We're very happy that it's been continued," said Margaret Pelikan, Carmel library director, after the hearing. "(But) I think it's unfortunate that the real issue has been obscured."

Pelikan said the supervisors are looking at the city-county contract as a conflict between the "the haves and have-nots," instead of pursuing the real problem of finding more money to bring up the level of library services outside of the peninsula.

Pelikan said the cut in payments will manifest itself in less new books and about one-third less magazines.

CARMEL BASHING appeared to take center stage during much of the 1½-hour hearing held in supervisors chambers in Salinas on Tuesday, as residents from other areas denigrated Carmel in their fight for increased funding.

Several times residents from the Salinas Valley took pot shots at the new Harrison Memorial Library Park Branch, which opened last month in the renovated Crocker Bank building.

Mayor Jean Grace, however, pointed out that the majority of the library annex was funded by a gift from the library board of trustees.

"The county librarian should make an effort to get more gifts," she told the board, as a possible solution to its problem.

South County resident John McCune echoed Grace's suggestion, lamenting the lack of philanthropy. "Where, oh where, is Andrew Carnegie now that we need him?"

Pelikan said after the hearing that the county is not giving Carmel or the three other cities credit for providing a valuable service to county residents; HML serves Carmel Woods, Carmel Point, Pebble Beach and Carmel Hills, as well as those residents who travel here from outlying areas.

She added that the county has "historically chosen not to serve" its residents, leaving that task to the cities.

Jack Billwiller, former HML board of trustees president, told supervisors that 40 percent of borrowers from the Carmel library are from outside the city.

While this week's testimony ostensibly centered on whether or not to cancel the contracts, the larger problem looming before the board will continue to be keeping library services growing at the same pace as the expanding need.

For some testifying, the idea of robbing Peter to pay Paul, as the contract cancellation was perceived, was painfully transparent.

"You can't replace a full-service library with mail service and a bookmobile," said Kenneth Long, referring to suggestions made earlier by County Librarian Dallas Schaffer. "The (county) librarian should know that it's wrong to destroy a part of the system that's working fine to replace it with a part that's not working fine."

Even if the contracts had been cancelled, it is unclear how Schaffer would have fulfilled her "vision" for county libraries with only an additional $471,251.

She told the board that she saw a library system that is open more hours; one with materials in other languages; increased facilities and equipment; Read Readiness programs; homework centers; literacy training and full automation.

Moreover, if the county did not cancel the contracts with the four cities, she said, "We're going to be facing cuts and we're going to be closing doors."

FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman pointed out to residents testifying from more remote areas of the county that if the contracts were cancelled it did not mean that their area would necessarily receive increased library services.

"This should not become a divisive issue," she said. "Because the problem is too

'This should not become a divisive issue, because the problem is too severe and will require cooperation.'

— Karin Strasser Kauffman

severe and will require cooperation."

She added that she would vote for continued county funding for libraries during the budget hearings later this year.

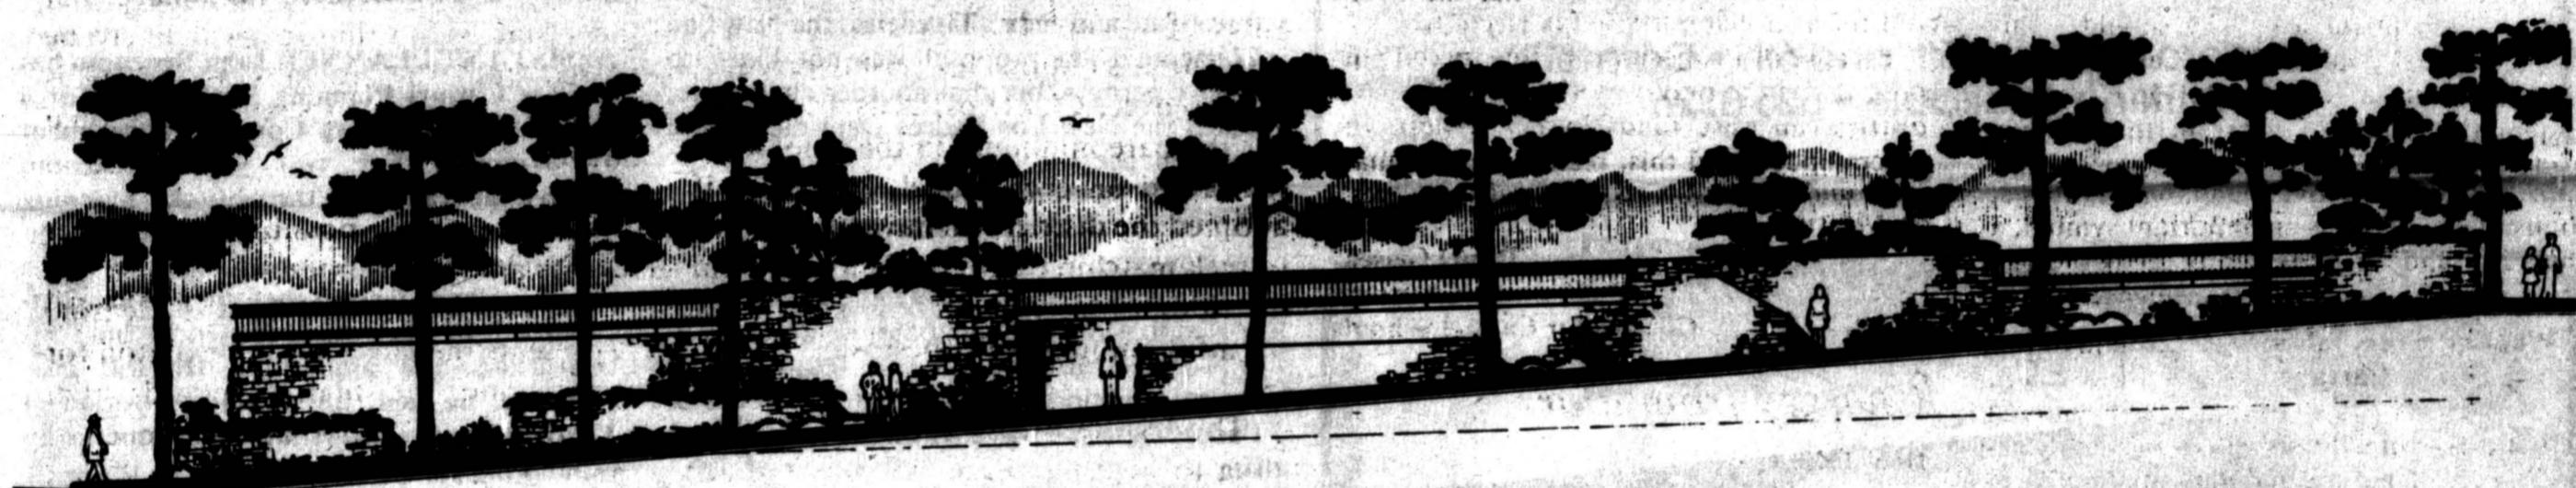

"People are not testifying to cut back library services," said 1st District Supervisor Marc Del Piero. "They are fearful of losing what they have."

Currently, he said, the county has "enough money to provide a mediocre service for everyone."

He added that "In order to remedy this problem there will need to be an additional revenue source," such as a special district or sales tax.

On Tuesday supervisors kept a clause in the contract to be able to cancel the agreement if Pebble Beach is incorporated, which would further strain the county's budget.

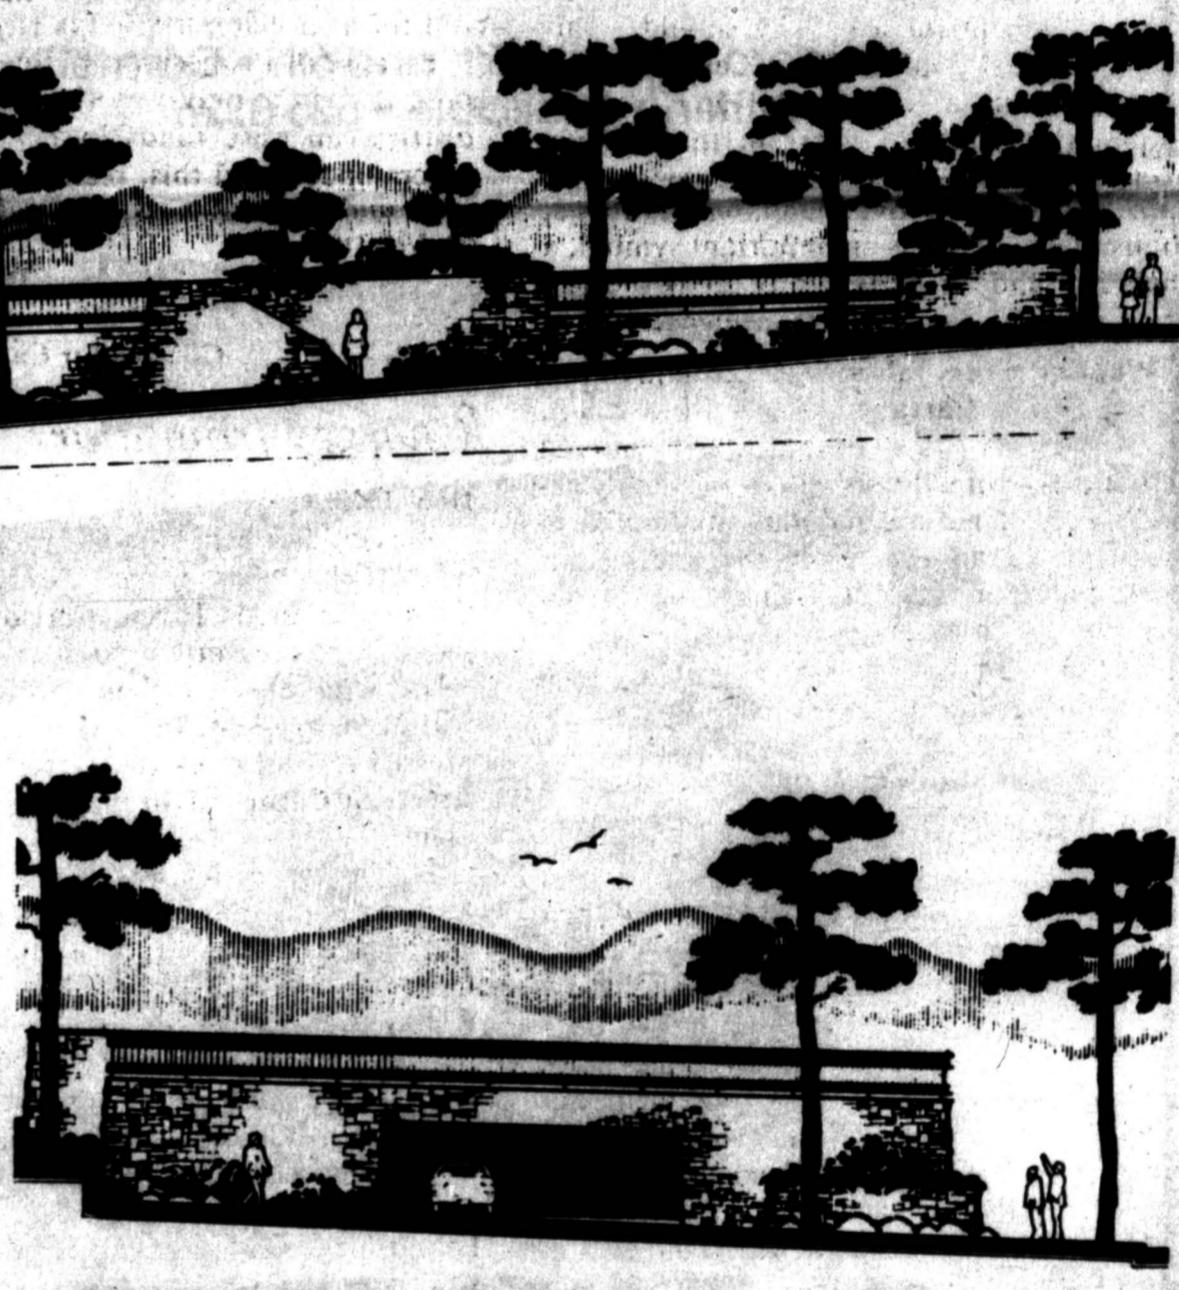

Also a task force will be established to review and report to the board on countywide library service needs, city-county fiscal arrangement, consolidation of services and cooperation of sharing services and resources.

Council to consider approval of Pine Inn parking plan

By NANCY HILLS

THE CARMEL City Council could decide next week whether a controversial proposal for a two-level parking garage behind Pine Inn is in compliance with general plan policies.

The planning commission has already found that the project is in compliance with the general plan.

The issue will be reviewed at the council's meeting at 4 p.m., Tuesday, March 7 at Carpenter Hall in Sunset Center.

The proposal is to connect the two lots owned by the Pine Inn on Monte Verde Street and Sixth Avenue with three city-owned lots on Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue to construct a partially underground garage.

The Pine Inn would pay for the construction of the garage and, in exchange, will get the use of the underground portion of the facility holding 49 spaces.

The city would be able to use the surface space for whatever it decides to. If it uses it for parking, the city will net about 40 spaces. Currently, the three lots are used for parking.

The plans also call for the construction of public restrooms on Lincoln Street, paid for by the Pine Inn.

The garage would be one story above ground on the Monte Verde Street and street level along Lincoln Street.

The debate on the project has centered around the fact that the lots are all located within the R-1 zone and that this is the first multi-level parking structure proposed for Carmel.

It also precludes the city building its own underground facility on its three lots.

Councilmember Ken White had requested that the commission consider other uses for the property, but the commission found that other recommendations, such as senior citizen housing or open space, were not precluded by building the parking garage.

The city would get the air rights over the Pine Inn lots and retain the air right over its own property.

White has proposed that the council consider sending the proposed project for review to the city garage committee, originally set up to consider the multi-level structure at Sunset Center.

White, at the time a planning commissioner, was a member of that committee.

"I think that group has a lot of experience with these proposals," White said.

The committee would "first of all, have to look at the plans for garage facilities; secondly, where the entrances and exits will be; and how the city will profit" from the proposal, White said.

He added that he has concerns about the width of Monte Verde Street and Sixth Avenue and the ability of those two roadways to handle the traffic generated by a garage.

Even if the council finds the proposal in compliance with the general plan, it will not mean approval of the project. It simply is a finding that such a project is not illegal.

News notes:

Council to decide if condos are for Carmel

THE CARMEL City Council is scheduled to determine if condominiums are prohibited by the general plan.

The decision was triggered by an application in the R-4 district for the construction of three condominiums on Mission Street.

The planning commission voted that condominiums were legal and property owner Cedric Choi could submit his application.

Currently, condominiums are illegal in the R-4 district, but the proposed specific plan for the area prohibits them.

Commission chairman Olof Dahlstrand said he believed that condominiums are beneficial because they help supply the housing market.

Also on the agenda is an appeal by Paul Laub of the planning commission's denial of sliding glass doors in the Paradise Building, corner of Ocean Avenue and Dolores Street, along the Dolores Street side.

Laub currently has "more than five but less than 10 lawsuits" in process with the city, according to City Administrator Doug Schmitz.

Planning commission to meet March 8

THE CARMEL Planning Department will consider an application by Sharper Image to occupy an Ocean Avenue space at Carmel Plaza and an application by the plaza itself to expand outdoor seating.

The commission will meet at 3:30 p.m., Wednesday, March 8 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

Sharper Image has applied to take over the former location of Fiori, a clothing store that closed at the end of 1988.

The plaza has requested to change the exterior of the Plaza Cafe and move some of the interior seating to exterior seating on the Ocean Avenue side.

Los Padres dam to be subject of workshop

WITH THE New Los Padres Dam now in the starring role, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board will conduct a workshop tonight, March 2, to inform the public about the project.

Water district chairman Nick Lombardo announced Feb. 15 that due to opposition from state and federal agencies, the New San Clemente Dam proposal was not likely to receive permits, but that another alternative, called the New Los Padres Dam did have a good chance.

The agencies have objections to the New San Clemente Dam's negative impacts on the environment.

State and federal agency representatives involved in a symposium about the water supply project confirmed that they felt, based on the information at hand, that the New Los Padres Dam site was environmentally a better site.

The workshop on the project is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Thursday, March 2 in Monterey City Council Chambers.

Project manager Henrietta Stern explained that the staff will review what the New Los Padres Dam is; how changing the preferred project emphasis in the environmental impact report/statement to New Los Padres Dam affects the permitting process; and possibly will review other water supply projects proposed for the peninsula.

In the meantime, the water district is working on developing a Phase IV rationing plan. Phase IV may include a building moratorium on the peninsula.

ASSISTANT PLANNER John Bencomo has left the Carmel Planning Department for a position with Ventura County's department of planning. For two years, Bencomo ushered homeowners through the planning process, conducting the review for most of the residential applications. Consensus at the planning department is that the popular Bencomo will be very much missed by both his co-workers and applicants. He will miss everyone, he said, but the new position at Ventura County offers him opportunities to expand his planning experience.

BUSINESS BEAT

By David Leland

Beware of paper pirates

THE BETTER Business Bureau is warning Carmel businesses owners to be on the lookout for telephone solicitors selling phony office supplies, also known as "paper pirates."

The bureau is reporting an inordinate number of victims in Carmel, but adds that the problem is an on-going one in all parts of the peninsula.

Here's how the scam works:

- A merchant, which also encompasses churches, schools or any other organization using office supplies, receives a call from a supplier in distress, who claims he is being forced to liquidate his stock for one reason or another.
- He is vague about the location of his store.
- He casually drops the name of the chairman of your board or someone high up in your business, and then suggests that you were to be contacted.
- He is unlikely to have a sales catalog which can be mailed to you.
- He wants a decision right now.

The peddlers specialize in copier paper, toner and supplies, which they will represent as a brand-name product. On further examination, however, it turns out to be of lesser quality.

A good rule of thumb: if the deal sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

Here's how to protect yourself:

- Do not buy from a new supplier until you have verified his company's existence.
- Do not accept COD shipments — insist on open account billing.

If you run into this sort of problem or hear of anybody that has, contact the BBB at 372-3182, so they can begin to build a profile on the con artist.

A real gem... Carmel jeweler Carol Andrews of Sun Studio Jewelry has added the advanced title of "Certified Gemologist" to her previously bestowed "Registered Jeweler" title.

Awarded by the American Gem Society, the two awards take long hours of study in gemology and the completion of a set of comprehensive examinations.

"I want to congratulate Andrews on achieving a level of skill reached only by some 800 merchants in the United States and Canada," said William Underwood, AGS president.

The American Gem Society, an association of fine jewelers, is dedicated to consumer protection and gemological expertise.

New to you... The Company Store, a designer's boutique specializing in sizes 14 through 24, opened this week at 153 Crossroads.

Designed in The Company Store's San Francisco facility, dresses and coordinating separates feature the Lady Like label, as well as other widely known designers.

The Company Store also features unique jewelry and hand-painted scarves.

Located at 153 Crossroads Blvd., The Company Store will hold an informal modeling of spring fashions on Saturday, March 4, which will be followed by champagne.

Employment law program... On March 8, Monterey College of Law will present a program of interest to employees and employers: Employment Law; Hiring Practices and Termination Procedures.

Scheduled to take place from 7 to 9 p.m. at Del Monte Center in the former Wells Fargo Building, the program will feature two attorneys with experience in this field: Susan Dauphine, of Hoge, Fenton, Jones & Appel, Inc. and Michelle Welsh of Stoner, Welsh & Schmidt.

The program will cover recent developments in employment law and clarify what questions cannot be asked in employment interviews.

The class is $10. For more information call 373-3301.

An angel's touch... Sidney Leah Angel, certified massage practitioner, is on hand to provide a holistic approach to her craft.

Making housecalls on the peninsula, Angel said she provides "whole-body awareness," taking in emotions, physicality and spirituality.

Angel, having travelled in the countries of Mexico, Canada, Europe, Israel and Greece, to name a few, is now ready to give those country's perspectives to her clients. She can be reached at 659-5045.

Good show... Pebble Beach resident and insurance broker Jeff Craig has been selected to serve on the 1989-90 INC. Magazine Insurance Advisory Panel. Craig is one of 10 brokers selected out of more than 250 nominees.

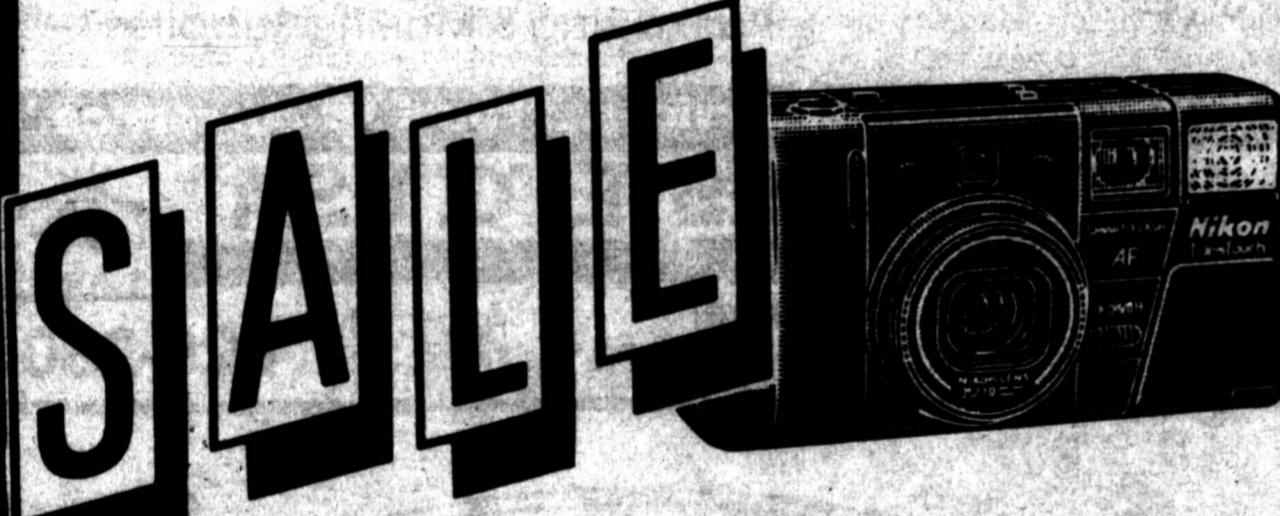

INC. Magazine formed the panel to bring agents' and brokers' views to the publication's more than 630,000 subscribers.

"I'm pleased to be chosen for this important position and I'm looking forward to representing California," said Craig. "It's especially important now during the Prop. 103 climate."

The panel will help present a clear picture of the proper role insurance plays in a growing business. Panel members represent every region of the country.

Craig will begin his duties this week by attending a conference in Boston, Mass.

Opponents of proposed Palo Colorado park file suit

By DAVID LELAND

OPPONENTS OF a proposed nature preserve slated for Palo Colorado Canyon filed a lawsuit this week against

'We feel (the lawsuit) is premature... (And) we're more than willing to meet members of the community who have reasonable concerns.'

— Gary Tate

the county park district in an effort halt the project.

The property, located on 1,157 acres of redwood forest in the Upper Bixby Creek watershed, was purchased last week by the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District from the Big Sur Land Trust for $1.2 million.

Filed by the Canyons Neighborhood Association and Michael Caplin, the complaint alleges that the park district was negligent in its environmental assessment; the purchase was not in the district's long-range plans, which violates its own policy; and also claims that there could be a conflict of interest between the park district and land trust.

The association is made up mostly of Palo Colorado Canyon residents and has fought unsuccessfully for the land to be given a permanent easement by the land trust.

Moreover, the group worries that, with the U.S. Forest Service campground at Botchers Gap two miles further up Palo Colorado Canyon Road, the narrow road could become clogged, which would present an increased fire danger.

"If the park becomes a reality, it would create pressure to widen Palo Colorado Canyon Road," said Caplin. "That would require removal of old growth redwoods and the concrete channelization of Palo Colorado Creek. The proposed park would threaten rather than protect the environment and rustic character of the area."

District General Manager Gary Tate disputed the allegations during a telephone interview with The Pine Cone.

"We feel (the lawsuit) is premature," he said. He said the allegation of the environmental impact report will be addressed during use permit hearings before the Monterey County Planning Commission.

At that time commissioners may require an EIR. Also, the planning commission's decision may be appealed to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

The conflict of interest allegation, cited because Zad Levy serves on both the land trust and park district board of directors, is "without merit," Tate said.

He added that the park district does not have a long-range plan and has hired a consultant to develop one. In the interim, the park district's plans are in accordance with the Big Sur Area Land Use Plan.

Tate said the district has attempted to take into account residents' concerns.

"We're more than willing to meet members of the community who have reasonable concerns," he said.

Meanwhile Caplin's group is circulating a referendum which requires the park district to submit the acquisition of the land to the voters within the district.

The association is attempting to secure 6,000 signatures by March 8.

"Response to the petition has been positive," Caplin said. "We gathered nearly 1,000 signatures on our first day. People who have been following the issue understand that the park district has been pushing the project in spite of overwhelming opposition at hearings.

'Those who are familiar with the canyon say it doesn't make sense to create another public use area there. Everyone is sensitive about creating something which might attract more tourists.'

YES, WE HAVE PLENTY OF WATER

The foresight and enterprise of the officials of the Del Monte Properties Company in constructing the San Clemente reservoir and dam in Carmel Valley two years ago, becomes more and more apparent when consideration is taken of the present lack of rain.

Were it not that San Clemente lake contains an almost inexhaustible supply of H₂O, and were the former source of supply the only one, the water users of the entire Monterey Peninsula would now be on a water ration. As it is, we have all the water we need, while communities in other parts of the state are limited in the quantity they may use.

YOU CAN'T KEEP PAL IN JAIL

Pal, the almost human dog, is at liberty and his freedom is protected for another, thanks to Bessie Brown.

Bessie last week-end heard that Pal had been picked up by Humane Society officials because he had no license tag. She raised the bail, altogether $450, for license and penalty, and rushed over to effect Pal's release.

Now Pal is free again to stroll the street, seeing old friends, and stride along with that sailor's roll of his.

What Pal wants to know now is why all those cats whose licenses haven't been paid are allowed to roam Carmel in such numbers. (There's a city ordinance requiring licensing of cats).

SUNSET SITE PURCHASE TERMED 'FEASIBLE'

A representative of the firm of Stone and Youngberg was in Carmel last Tuesday to report that the plan of the city to buy the Sunset School site, for possible use for the site of a Music and Arts Center, was quite feasible. The full report will be presented to the city council at the regular meeting next Wednesday night.

A spokesman for the city said it was conceivable that the matter would be placed before the voters of Carmel at the general municipal election which will be held on April 14.

SHARING AVAILABLE WATER WOULD LIMIT GROWTH HERE

Growth in Carmel Valley and the Carmel area would be restricted sharply under proposals for local governments to share available water to avert a shortage before the turn of the century.

Projections in a Monterey Peninsula Water Management District study presented Feb. 13 are that the Peninsula will be out of water for the California-American Water Co. service area by 1993 if growth continues at its present rate and no new sources of water are developed.

The report, prepared by the district for the California Coastal Commission, recommends that Monterey County and the six cities in the district agree to divide up the supplies and then plan their short-term development based on how much water they receive.

The city of Carmel soon may enter the computer age.

A proposed $180,000 city-wide computer system plus a plan for another mail survey of residents will be discussed when the Carmel City Council meets in a special session at 4 p.m. Thursday, March 1, at city hall.

Hartnell College computer science professor Richard Meyer, who was paid $8,000 by the city for the report, is expected to detail his plan for the proposed system that will serve every city department except Harrison Memorial Library. Park district to meet March 6

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Regional Park District Board of Directors will hold its March 6 meeting at 7:30 p.m. at the Mid-Valley Fire Station.

The board will consider the purchase of the 145-acre Rancho Don Juan property located adjacent and west of the 3,100-acre Garland Ranch Regional Park in Carmel Valley. The district is negotiating for the purchase of the ranch, but no sale price has been disclosed.

Gary Tate, district manager, said that the proposed addition of this ranch would provide for extension of the lower trails, add one-quarter mile stretch of the Carmel River, provide an existing ranch house which has potential for a public meeting area and for district office space, would enable the district to convert the existing Visitor Center/Office to an Outdoor Education Center and would provide ownership of the green bridge across the Carmel River ensuring permanent access to the park.

The park district staff is also working with the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District staff to explore the feasibility of a cooperative project whereby the park district would make available to the water district some 40-70 acres of floodplain parkland for use by the water district for vegetation enhancement, a necessary requirement to mitigate the impact from the construction of any new dam project. In exchange, the water district would participate, on a reimbursement basis, in the acquisition of new parkland like Rancho Don Juan.

Redwood forest transfer completed

AFTER YEARS of negotiations and joint planning, the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District and the Big Sur Land Trust (BSLT) announced the final transfer of a 1157-acre redwood forest in Upper Bixby Creek watershed.

The parcel was sold on Feb. 23 by the BSLT to the district for a "bargain-sale price" of $1.32 million according to Brian Steen, land trust executive director. The BSLT purchased the parcel in December 1987 with a temporary loan from the Packard Foundation. In 1983, the property became the center of controversy when a timber harvest plan was approved on a 70-acre portion of the forest. The district used funds specifically earmarked in the California Park and Wildlife Bond Act (Proposition 70), approved by voters in June 1988.

The park district intends to manage the parcel as a day-use, hiking-only, nature preserve with limited public access by reservation.

An application for a Monterey County use permit is being submitted; the preserve will not be opened for public access until approval of this permit.

The project still remains controversial with residents of Palo Colorado who have expressed concern over potential increase of traffic and fire danger. (See related story in this issue.)

However, Robert Griffin, district board president, stated that "controlled access with a reservation system, an on-site ranger, together with the supervision and coordination of the U.S. Forest Service, California Department of Forestry and the Mid-Coast Fire Brigade should mitigate the concerns of local residents."

Steen added, "The land trust pursued the acquisition of this property since 1983 for two purposes: One, to prevent the commercial logging of the property and secondly to see that the property was properly managed. By selling this land to the park district, we are guaranteeing the achievement of these objectives."

CARMEL... AS I SEE IT

By Betty Barron

Living in make-believe

Take a giant step backwards into your childhood and fantasyland. It is not difficult when you live in Carmel.

ALTHOUGH KNOWN for its artists, painters and writers, from the first days of the "village," the architects and builders, the carpenters and landscapers must claim much credit for the natural charm which distinguished the early days of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

JOAN HARDING (right), welcomed her friend Ruth Barron to her Carmel home appropriately named "Hansel."

And, because of their craftsmanship and detailing, the use of sturdy natural elements such as original Carmel stone, carefully constructed leaded windows and rough-hewn, but seasoned wooden beams, these buildings remain today much as they were originally built.

Such is the collection known as the Comstock homes. These houses are not difficult to find. Many are located just a block from Ocean Avenue up the hill on Sixth Avenue. The very first one built was on Torres near the corner of Sixth...the cozy little cottage named "Gretel."

Why not "Hansel?" There really isn't an answer to this question. But, to find Gretel, you must first find Hansel, for this larger cottage is visible from Torres, an almost unbelievable home with twin pitched roofs flanked by a twisted, rather toppling over stone chimney.

Gretel was built first by Hugh Comstock in 1924. Actually, only half of Gretel was built, and Hugh and his wife, Mayotta Brown, lived in a tiny kitchen-bedroom with an equally tiny joining bath. Soon Hugh scrounged around the neighborhood and found bits and pieces such as French doors and windows from other buildings being abandoned, as well as the lovely caramel-colored Carmel stone, and added on to his minuscule cottage.

After a time the little Gretel was found to be too small, since Mayotta was involved in an enterprise of her own, making the irresistible Otsy-Totsy dolls, which became so popular that she needed to expand her workshop. That was when Hansel was born.

Hansel was built nearer to the street, under the spindly live oak trees still arching gracefully over the wildflowers and native grasses growing in wild abandon. Hansel was born in 1925.

Although neither an architect or carpenter, Hugh Comstock was gifted with a keen eye, an inherent sense of design and use of space, a love of textures and, above all, a respect for nature. His homes seemed to grow from the earth itself and today remain an integral part of the land. What elfin quirk caused him to make his homes look as if they had come out of a storybook no one quite knows.

His "eyebrow type" roofs of bubble-stone shingles were steeply pitched, but perfectly proportioned. Beamed ceilings and hand-carved casements gave a cozy and yet a finished look to the interiors. Even today, the French windows allow the sunsets to stream into both Hansel and Gretel, igniting the warm stone fireplace in Hansel and shadowing the walls with intricate designs.

The present owner of both Hansel and Gretel is Joan Harding, who bought the two Comstock houses in the fall of 1963. She has opened her doors to friends as well as young people needing a home away from home. When she finds herself with an extra guest, she resorts to an upper cupboard snuggled into the ceiling off the living-room of Hansel. Now a laddered sleeping loft, this 6-by-4-foot cupboard is furnished with a mattress and swinging doors for privacy. It is the only "room" in either Hansel or Gretel that does not have a window.

"I need windows," says Joan Harding. "Who could design even a bathroom without a window?"

She is not attuned to the modern designer who uses air conditioning, vents and such devices in exchange for windows.

All around Hansel and Gretel are other "Comstocks"...as well as a sprinkling of these storybook houses throughout Carmel. There is the famed Tuck Box restaurant on Dolores Street, which some dispute as to whether or not it is truly a "Comstock," but verified are houses name the "Obers," the "Guest House," "Our House," the "Doll's House" (which was the original name of Hansel), and "Yellow Bird."

Do you remember the Bill Bates cartoon depicting a mama bird and a wee fledgling just leaving the nest? The caption read: "And, remember...NEVER on a Comstock!"

Lest we forget.

CHS's rare triple play: three valedictorians

By DAVID LELAND

COMMENCEMENT MIGHT take a few minutes longer at Carmel High School this June, what with three valedictorians sharing the bill.

For seniors Jason Lande, 18, Heather Arnold, 18, and Cindy Nishiguchi, 17, the road through high school has been paved with straight As.

'You get out of it what you put into it. Certainly if they work hard now, it will be easier later and they'll get a lot of benefits.'

— Heather Arnold

FOR HEATHER Arnold, straight As represents a commitment that began several years ago, when she met her co-valedictorians.

"I'm proud of them," said CUSD Supt. Bob Infelise. "Carmel maintains a tradition of high academic standards and these three young people epitomize those standards."

Keep in mind that the classes in which these students achieved such excellence were no piece of cake, so to speak. With the challenge of calculus, advanced languages and college-level English, the pressure never stopped.

"It took a lot of work," said Lande, who plans to attend the University of California at San Diego next fall. "I just kind of got in a groove and started doing it."

As can be expected, hard work is the central theme in all of the three students' high school careers of attaining perfect marks.

"It was hard work and self-motivation, I guess," offered Nishiguchi, the former ASB president credited with bringing student government back into the mainstream of academic life. "It's kind of like a goal you set for yourself."

Of course it helps that all three are best friends, with Lande and Nishiguchi having known each other since kindergarten and Arnold coming on the scene in junior high school.

"This is something that started a long, long time ago and it just sort of fell into place," said Arnold, noting that the trio often studies together.

"I like the fact that all three of us are doing it (straight As), because it's something new and exciting," said Arnold, adding that she plans to attend UC Berkeley with an undeclared major.

"I'd like to do something in movies or television," said Arnold, an aspiring actress. "If that falls through, I'll do something in international relations so I can travel."

While Arnold enjoys history and English, both Lande and Nishiguchi go in more for mathematics, physics and calculus.

But Lande pointed out that there is more to doing well in a subject than meets the eye.

"It doesn't mean I'm in love with physics," he said of his expertise. "It's the teacher that keeps me interested."

'It has to be something that comes from within. You have to want it for yourself; you can't do it for anybody else.'

— Cindy Nishiguchi

Nishiguchi said she plans to attend Pomona College where she will major in mathematics, and later hopes to become a professor.

"I want to be around people and I really like math," she said. "So the ideal combination is to go into teaching."

DON'T FOR a minute, however, believe that this special group of students are a bunch of bookworms either.

In addition to working at the Carmel Drug Store, Lande is a star soccer player and was recently awarded the Athlete of the Week Award by KMST-46 television station.

"I've had more contact with coaches than administrators," said Lande of his search for a four-year college.

Nishiguchi spends her time, when she's not studying, performing clerical work at Monterey Building Development, playing field hockey and working with her church group.

In addition to her position as assistant manager at the Varsity Shop, Arnold does bookkeeping for a local physician. She is also involved in the drama program at the high school and spends one month each summer performing community theater in Colorado.

VALEDICTORIAN CINDY Nishiguchi said she was able to work hard in high school by pulling from a power within.

Just in case there are any younger students interested in achieving the ultimate in academic success, this year's valedictorians offered some sage advice.

"It's important to work hard from the beginning. Because if you fall behind it's hard to catch up."

— Jason Lande

'It's important to work hard from the beginning. Because if you fall behind it's hard to catch up.'

beginning," Lande said. "Because if you fall behind it's hard to catch up."

Nishiguchi added that straight As is an affair of the heart.

"It has to be something that comes from within," she said. "You have to want it for yourself; you can't do it for anybody else."

Arnold said it's good to keep an eye toward the future.

"You get out of it what you put into it," she said. "Certainly if they work hard now, it will be easier later and they'll get a lot of benefits."

JASON LANDE has managed to combine his athletic talents with academic prowess to achieve his goals.

FIRE LINES

By Gaudenz Panholzer

Hot liquid burns

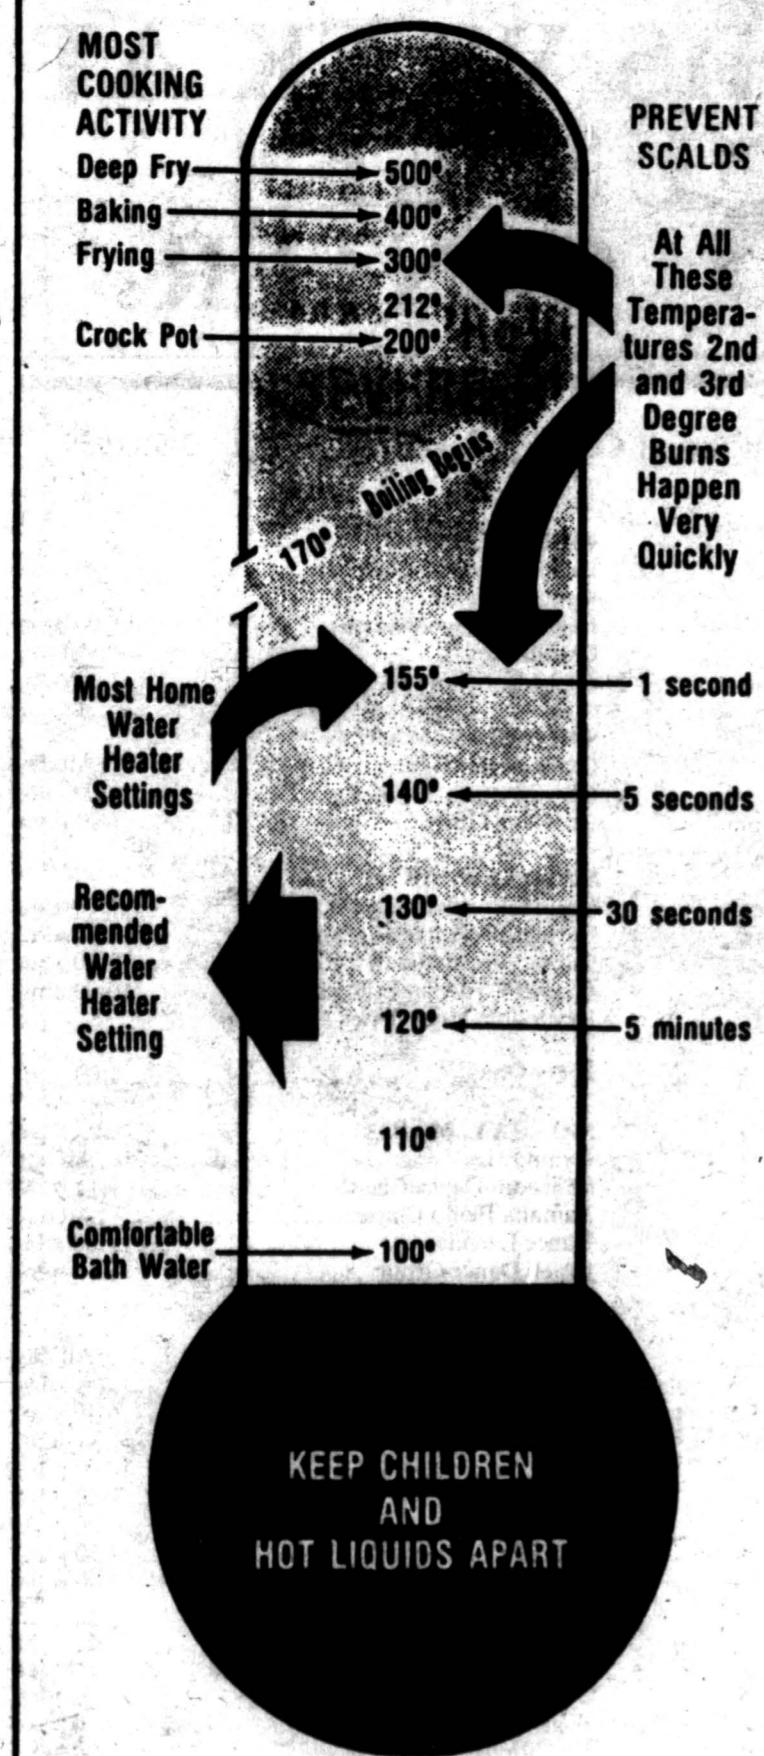

TWO MILLION Americans are burned each year. Burns are one of the major causes of accidental death and injury to children. Eighty percent of burns to children under 8 years old are caused by hot liquids. The most unfortunate fact is that many burns can easily be prevented with a little care and common sense.

Hot liquids are one of the most common causes of burns. Many people are not aware of the danger posed by a hot cup of coffee or tea. Most hot drinks are made with boiling water which is at 210° F. By the time they are served, drinks may have cooled a bit but are still over 150° F which can cause a serious burn in less than 2 seconds.

Hot water from the tap is another common source of danger. People are misled to believe that an automatic dishwasher requires hot water at 135-150° F in order to get dishes clean. A hot water heater setting of 120-130° F is adequate for clean dishes. Settings above this can cause severe accidental scalds in the shower or bathtub.

The following are some things that can be done to prevent hot liquid burns:

- Set the thermostat on your hot water heater at 120-130° F. Check this with a thermometer as the dial may be inaccurate.
- Make sure a child is not nearby when carrying or serving hot liquids.
- Do not hold a child in your lap while drinking hot coffee or tea.
- When young children are present, use placemats on tables rather than tablecloths. Tablecloths can be pulled causing hot liquids to spill. Do not leave a young child unattended at a table where hot liquids/foods are present.
- Keep young children out of the kitchen while cooking is going on.
- Keep pot handles pointed toward the back of the stove; cook on rear burners.
- Use pot holders. Lift lids so the steam escapes from the side of the pot away from you.
- Do not have dangling appliance cords that can be pulled causing hot grease or liquids to spill. Keep appliances to the rear of counters.

TIME NEEDED to produce a serious burn at various temperatures.

- Be careful with items heated in microwave ovens as they can get very hot.
- Watch children in bathtub; remove or lock hot water faucet handle to make it unworkable for small children.

NATURALLY HOT liquids are not the only source of burn injuries. Care should be used with smoking materials, heaters and other appliances, electrical cords and fixtures, and dangerous chemicals.

Should a burn occur:

1. Carefully, but quickly, remove victim from any heat source.
2. Stop burning process—STOP, DROP, and ROLL until flames are out.
3. Call 911 for assistance.
4. Check breathing; perform CPR if necessary.
5. Cool burns with cool water (not ice).
6. Remove rings, belts, shoes, and other constrictive clothing before swelling occurs.
7. Cover burn area with a clean sheet or dressing.
8. Keep victim warm and comfortable.
9. Do not apply ointments, creams, or butter.

For chemical burns brush off and dry chemicals then flush with copious amounts of water for at least 20 minutes.

For electrical burns carefully eliminate source of electricity before touching victim.

In all cases avoid having uninjured people becoming additional victims.

Remember: COOL A BURN. Call 911.

TAKE MY WORD FOR IT

By D. Patrick Gallagher

Greetings

IT'S NO secret that we seldom say goodbye any more. For that matter, we seldom say any more, any more, but let's stick with goodbye for the moment. In America at least, we seem to have become addicted to the phrase Have a nice day, a phrase to which a good many people seem to object. I suppose the objection stems from the assumption that the phrase has lost any meaning and is repeated simply by rote. The difficulty with criticizing Have a nice day on those grounds is we forget goodbye is a word resulting from exactly the same practice. Nevertheless, the too-common use of Have a nice day elicits a variety of responses including "Don't tell me what kind of day to have." On the East Coast, the phrase is ridiculed as a Californiaism, similar to eating sprouts on one's sandwich.

Goodbye is, of course, a contraction of the longer phrase God be with you. The Oxford Dictionary of English Etymology tells us the literary origins of the longer term precede the 13th century, during which the modern form seems to have evolved. Chaucer provides us with an early, and now common, variation, "good night," God give you good night. It seems rather contradictory for us to dismiss one phrase, Have a nice day, on the same basis with which we embrace another, goodbye.

In tracing the phrase Have a nice day, the earliest reference I have been able to find occurs in a 1954 British film about a World War II sea rescue service, The Sea Shall Not Have Them. The line is delivered by the narrator in a voice suspiciously like that of Trevor Howard, as Have a good day. That provides a pedigree of some 35 years, which ought to be sufficient to warrant some respect.

As goodbye seems to disappear from the scene, so does hello. Often no greeting at all precedes the beginning of conversation today. We immediately launch into the purpose of our encounter with friends, store clerks or anyone else. In literature, hello can be traced to Dickens in the form halloo, a cry used to hail another. Its common use as a greeting, however, may be less than a century old and may have been started by Thomas Edison. Hullo, essentially the same word, was extant in 19th century Britain, as an expression of surprise. On July 18, 1877, Thomas Edison shouted "Halloo!" into his first phonograph recording and appears in a subsequent letter to have suggested a modified version, hello, as an appropriate greeting for the telephone. As Jack Smith pointed out in a column last year, the use of hello spread rapidly afterward. "In 1880," he wrote, "delegates to the National Convention of Telephone Companies wore 'Hello' badges, telephone operators became known as 'Hello' girls in America and England, and in 1901 the song Hello Central, Give Me Heaven swept the nation."

Greetings such as Hi seem to have derived from Latin based exclamations and become common in English about the 15th century. Others are self-explanatory, such as "How are you?" to which no one appears really to want an answer.

During World War II, Germans, trained in English, attempted to penetrate U.S. lines and an elaborate ceremony of greeting and response was employed by GIs to uncover them. The jazzy "Hello Joe, what'd ya know?" required the response, "Just got back from Kokomo." The town of Kokomo, which is in Indiana and which I have probably misspelled, had no significance other than the fact it rhymes with know and Joe. This exchange, if Hollywood is to be trusted, usually was followed by a recital of the latest baseball standings or some such test of Americanism.

A story is told about Beatrice Lillie, Canadian-born actress and successful comedienne, during an encounter with Clifton Daniel. While walking out on Piccadilly one day, and seeing Ms. Lillie approaching on the arm of a man, Daniel maneuvered himself so that she could not avoid running into him. When she did, she threw open her arms and embraced him.

"Darling," she cried, "how are you?" Still holding onto him, she leaned back and examined his face. "And who are you?" she asked.

Samuel Goldwyn, every time he met Groucho Marx, would greet him with the question, "How's Harpo?" This habit irritated Groucho, who eventually confronted Goldwyn to register his pique.

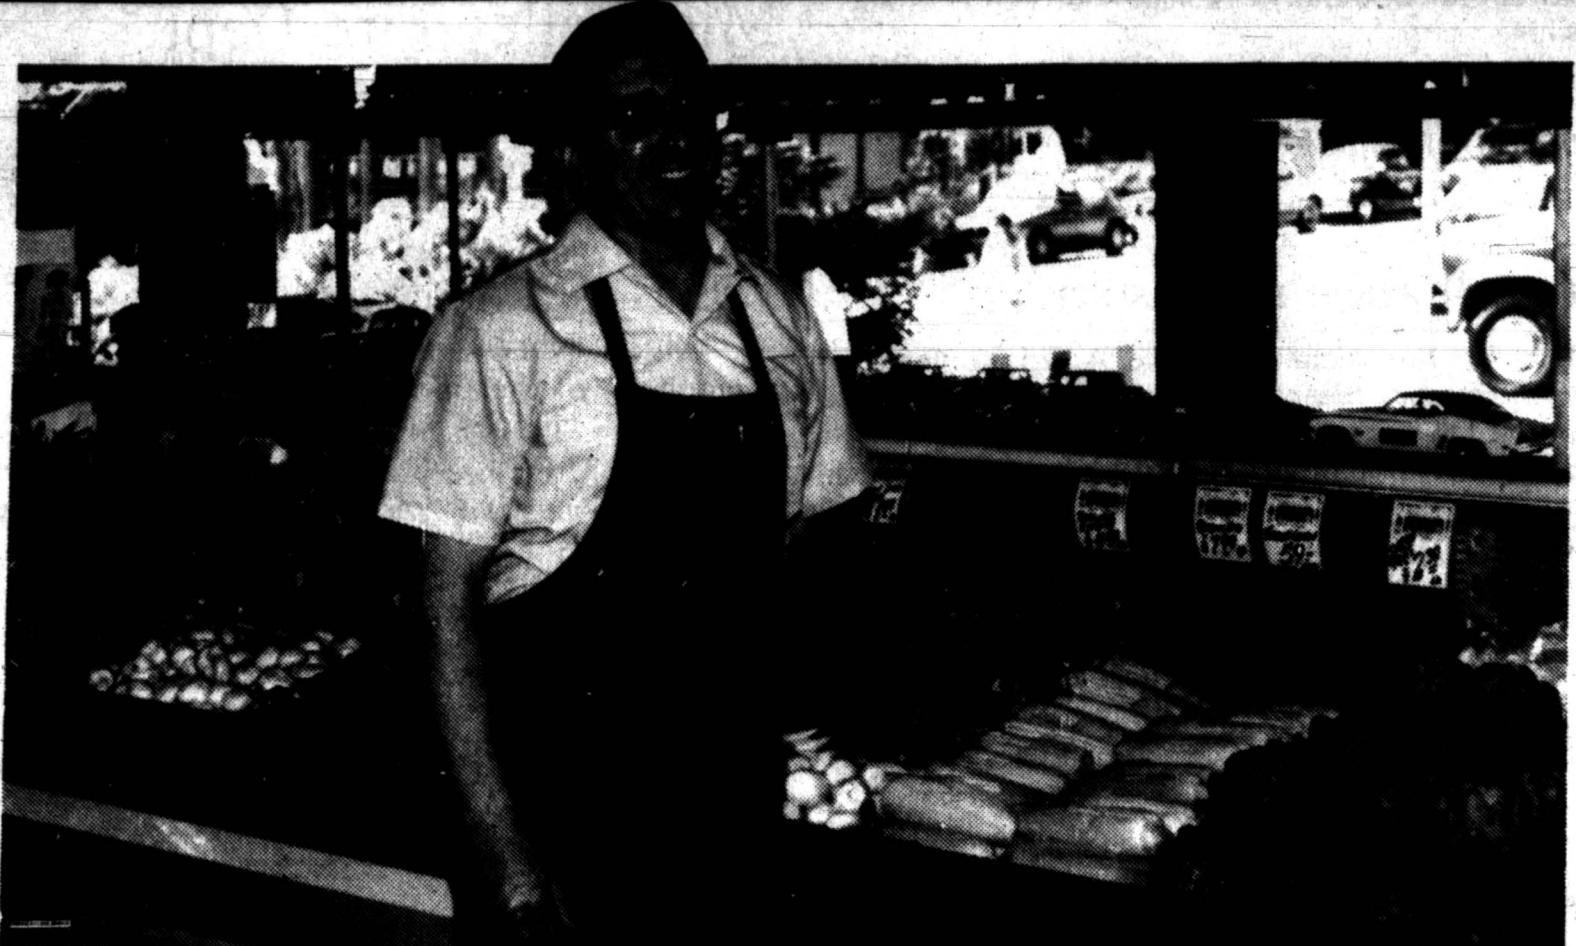

"Why," he asked, "do you always greet me by asking about Harpo? Why don't you ask about me?"

"How are you?" Goldwyn asked obligingly.

"I'm fine," Groucho said.

"Good," said Goldwyn, "and how's Harpo?"

There is no such word as anymore. Throw away your Webster's, burn Random House, and ostracize William Safire. The word simply does not exist. Outside the United States its use is considered a sign of linguistic barbarism. The correct form is any more.

Tax time again

YES, IT'S true. I know it seems as though we just took down our Christmas decorations, but in just six weeks, our tax returns will be due.

I'm told that an age-old myth describes accountants as typically stuffy, emotionless, bottom-line oriented, and if they have a sense of humor at all, you'll find it quite dry. Although I was unable to speak with every accountant on the peninsula, the handful mentioned below absolutely did not fit that mythical mold! On the contrary, there is an enthusiastic, competent, bright, personable crop of accounting professionals in the area, and here's a sampling of their thoughts:

David Cohen of Finn & Cohen states that he and his partner came from a larger firm to develop more one-on-one relationships with clients from the community. They invite all calls, even if they're not about accounting problems — laughingly adding that they enjoy the topic of sports as well.

Green-Slade & Associates (formerly "Green & Slade, Inc."), reports that they're "the best tax-shrinks in town," not only because they do a great deal of client counseling and hand-holding, but because they'll go to the ends of the earth to find a more tax advantageous or tax-free method for their clients' transactions.

Leslie Bruhn (daughter of Dick Bruhn, founder of A Man's Store and M'Lady Bruhn, and natives of the area), is not only a CPA but also has her master's degree in taxation — no small feat! Leslie has one client in particular who waits until April 14 and then wonders "what's the rush?" Leslie remains calm and confident despite that kind of stress. She feels a great sense of victory, reward and satisfaction from structuring transactions in advance to avoid or greatly minimize her clients' tax liabilities. Way to go, Leslie!

Hanson Rotter's staff fluctuates between 15 and 18 in number, so they mean it when they say "we are prepared for your return." Commenting on the accounting profession's dry reputation, they take their work very seriously, but believe in "work hard, play hard." They promise, they don't wear the green eyeshade or accountant's cuff anymore!

Don Glidewell's practice is heavily involved in both business and tax advising. He comments that the tax simplification act has created probably one of the most difficult filing seasons ever. Don comes from the school of thought that if we really want tax simplification, we should require every congressman to prepare his own tax return. Right on, Don!

Nancy Callahan is a CPA and a Certified Financial Planner who traded in her "black hat" as an IRS agent for a "white hat" when she joined the private sector some nine years ago. Yes, even her heart skips a beat when she sees the IRS return address in mail she receives. Nancy focuses on resolving disputes with the IRS (shudder), personal income tax preparation and personal financial planning.

Barbara Hinderstein's staff says "C equals Creative, P equals Prompt, A equals Accurate — and that all adds up to the CPA for you."

Natha R. Witt comes from a large LA firm, but prefers the personal contact with clients on the peninsula. She teaches advanced accounting and auditing (the latter of which she performs in her own practice, as well), at Golden Gate University. Natha believes in "teaching" her clients and keeping them informed on tax developments and issues.

Daniel Lane says that the "humor cap" is always on in his office, even though they're very serious about keeping your tax burdens to a minimum.

Bruce Dunlap of Apger, Paik, Jennings, Dunlap & Kolb, says bigger is better, except when it comes to your tax liability. This staff in excess of 20 has the research capabilities and resources to deal with anything that comes along. He reminded me that the genius, Albert Einstein, once said, "The hardest thing in the world to understand is the income tax." They're available to help you understand at either their mouth-of-the-valley office or their Pacific Grove office.

Huey & Hudson, who handle the whole spectrum of tax matters, is a husband-and-wife team and proud of it. They have reason to be proud, having started their practice in their family room and now have two CPAs and an additional staff of seven working for them! They have "big city expertise" to apply to local small business and community needs. Dave Huey informed me that Bob Newhart had been an accountant before embarking on an entertainment career. Hey, it works for me!

So, despite the fact that the recent tax simplification act is jokingly referred to as the "Accountants' Full-Employment Tax Act," the biggest and most powerful (unwanted) partner in your business or personal life is the government. When Uncle Sam tries to take his tax bite out of you, your accountant's goal is to reduce that unwanted partner's share to the smallest amount legally possible.

I was unable to speak with Charles Winge, Green & Wriedt, Kasavan & Pope, the Tostevin Accountancy Corp., and many others you'll find in the Yellow Pages, but we have a wonderful assortment of accountants on the peninsula to serve our needs. They will make a dreaded chore as pleasant and painless as possible, so delay no longer! Make that appointment with your accountant today — remember, "an appointment today may keep the IRS away!"

SENIOR LINE

By Bill Schneider

Elder bash II

IN A recent column where I discussed the bashing of older drivers, I promised more on related areas. True to my word, here goes.

The San Jose Mercury News has really socked it to us in recent articles where the elderly are called "greedy geezers" and the so called good guys are "granny bashers."

I quote the lead paragraph from one article. "There is a dirty little secret about the federal budget that will be released today (Jan. 9, 1989): It robs the piggy banks of the nation's children to pay for the excesses of their parents and grandparents."

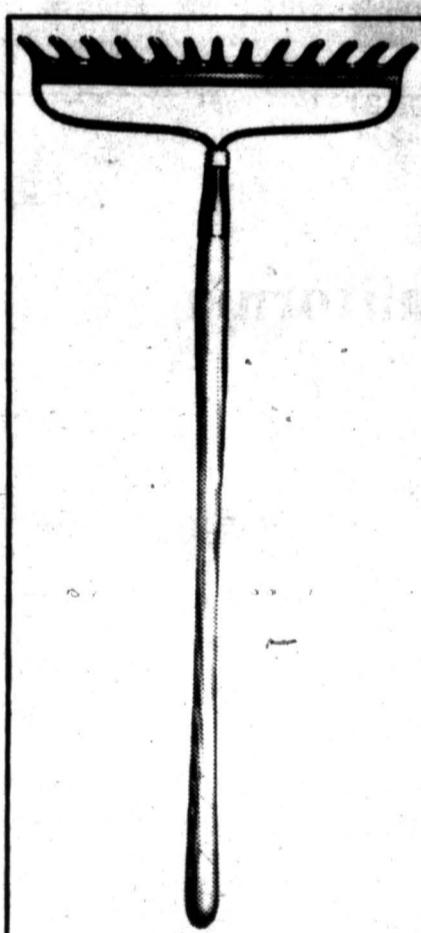

A follow-up commentary by Joanne Jacobs on Jan. 19 begins this way: "Old age is an incurable disease, Seneca used to say, but then he'd never met Claude Pepper. If the old Roman were still around, he'd be puzzled by our Pepperized priorities: unlimited medical care for the elderly, hit-and-miss care for the young; billions spent to keep the dying in intensive care beds, pennies pinched that might have kept new-borns out of intensive care." Perhaps euthanasia at age 65 would solve the problem.

Any individuals, including newspaper columnists, are entitled to their opinions on the cost and method of financing any public program but, when they stoop so low as to pit the elderly against children in a competition for dollars, I find it despicable and irresponsible journalism. I've talked to many social workers involved with both children and the elderly and you will find that most of them fear the confrontation espoused by the foregoing articles.

Both articles go on to show by figures and charts how the "greedy geezers" are sucking the life blood from innocent and helpless children. I could take these same figures, add a few of my own, and make a case for any position I choose in the Welfare-Medicare-Social Security game but that wouldn't be as interesting to the readers as granny-bashing.

My final thought for readers is to be active in our causes. Sound off and don't let those muckrakers sell papers at our expense.

This simple garden tool is a firefighter. It can help you clear away brush and leaves that act like kindling around your home. And you.

So if you live near the forest, do a little raking. And that's not all. Landscape your home with a fire retardant plant like ivy. Use spark arrester screens on your chimney and vents. And put fire retardant material on your roof and underneath your house where it is exposed.

Because a forest fire burns more than trees.

Carmel Heritage celebrates

THE PURPOSE of Carmel Heritage Society is to preserve Carmel's rich historic and cultural legacy. One major step was accomplished with the opening of the History Room in the new Harrison Memorial Library Annex. This is quite an accomplishment for the 5-year-old organization.

Carmel Heritage members were hosts Friday evening for a welcome party to show invited guests the beautiful display and repository area for the memorabilia donated and collected by this dedicated group.

Featured in the current display are Robinson Jeffers (Carmel's famous poet), Edward Kuster (Forest Theatre founder), Edward Weston, Perry Newberry and Robert Campbell, and floral paintings by one of Carmel's first artists, Ida Johnson (1852-1931), and George Sterling. James Henry spent a lifetime collecting works by George Sterling and then generously donated them to the History Room.

These items and many others are displayed in what used to be the vault of the bank (the former occupant of the building). Now, the edifice contains something of more enduring value than mere money — literature, art and historical references. A far more accurate barometer of life in Carmel-By-The-Sea in the 20th century. Historical artifacts of people and their productive lives which made Carmel what it is today and what it will be in the future.

To make one commentary: Sinclair Lewis (recent Yale grad), arrived in Carmel in 1909 and during his six-month stay he sold only one story — for $15 to a San Francisco magazine. The recent plaque placed on the cottage where he resided (to commemorate his stay), must have cost more than that. It's sad to note that many publishers still feel that the creative work of writers is worth no more than $15 today. (Ah, well, so much for that.)

The Carmel Heritage welcoming party brought out Carmelites of many years who had fun exchanging stories of years ago. Marjory Lloyd, Fred Farr, Harriette Rountree, Gus Arriola, Ted Durein, Howard Brunn, and others.

CH president, Roger Newell, who grew up in Carmel, is pleased with the current CH accomplishments and future goals. He told me that speakers have visited public schools to tell students about their rich local cultural history. An oral and video history is in progress and continues. Docent training will begin in a few weeks and a welcome call is out to those who would like to serve as docents, (who will guide guests through early Carmel history Monday-Friday, 1-5 and one Saturday a month.)

Mr. Newell says work toward the Flanders Mansion continues for a needed Historic Cultural Study Center for seminars, exhibits, extension courses, and other educational activities. The preservation committee is active in the comprehensive undertaking of preserving early Carmel structures.

Marjory Lloyd said that Carmel had some settlers in the 1890s, but it was not until 1903 with the arrival of Frank Devendorf and others that the area was organized and focalized. It is fitting that the History Room is located just across the street from Devendorf Park.

Parties for the Harrison Library annex (officially called the Park Branch), with its specially designed youth services (including low bathroom fixtures), were held Thursday night and all day Saturday. The Saturday "Grand Opening" featured two performances by talented mime Julie McBane.

WHAT DO you think happens the day after a successful first-time social event? The answer: planning begins for the one next year, of course.

As Jose Abarrientos, civic affairs chairman for the Del Rey Oaks Moose Lodge, and his committee removed the 1,000 balloons (specially ordered by Compos Delivery Service), for the First Annual Mardi Gras Costume Ball & Mid-Winter Carnival plans were cooking on high for the second one.

The Loyal Order of the Moose, a family-oriented organization, has been actively involved in community services for more than a hundred years. The enthusiastic support of lodge members was obviously behind the efforts on behalf of the Monterey Suicide Prevention and Crisis Center, the organization that benefitted from proceeds of the ball/carnival. The MSCC directly confronts the many problems surrounding suicides and other family difficulties.

Down came the balloons, decorative masks from the walls, tables and dangling from the ceiling that helped set the mood for the party attended by 300 people.

The Moose Lodge members believe in putting on a royal evening of fun and well-rounded entertainment. A 150-cake lottery was arranged by Joan Abarrientos; a gypsy fortune teller sat mysteriously in her darkened booth with secrets others were eager to learn. A four-course buffet, free party favors, prizes for costumes, along with door prizes were awarded at mid-evening.

Moose governor, Jerry O'Dea, was the lucky winner of the Val Strouth "tune-up" and Mrs. Gage Chrysler won the television set donated by Lighthouse TV & Video.

Pat Garrigues, executive director of MSCC, mentioned days before the ball that her vacuum cleaner had broken. Guess who won the Hoover Vacuum donated by Adam McDonald? Pat Garrigues. So there is justice (combined with luck) after all.

LIBRARIAN MAME Reid Noland (standing), and Lacy Faia (chairperson of the Carmel Heritage exhibit committee), leafed through a book on Robinson Jeffers' life and work, with Jeffers' son Garth and his wife Brenda.

Ball committee members were Beverly Englebrite, Debbie Wetle, Mike Homen, Sonny Collier, Richard Grapentin, Beverly Sherwood, Richard Peckham, Jerry O'Dea, Ken Morrison and Joan Abarrientos.

The Joe Ingram Danceables Band provided dance music and proceeds will help put the much-needed teenage suicide prevention educational program in operation by September at MSCC.

AS A banker I trusted no one. But at the Salvation Army I must rely on trust," stated former banker Lt. Robert L Rudd, co-director of Seaside Salvation Army with his wife, Lt. Rudd.

The answer was only one of many in an "award-winning interview" by Academy Award-winning actress Joan Fontaine, whose first experience with the merits of the SA began years ago when she resided in New York City.

The occasion was a "thank-you" luncheon for the news media. Awards were presented to Bill Brown, publisher of Carmel Pine Cone; Reginald Henry, Herald editor and Mack Jacobs of the Seaside Sentinel.

An incident happened just prior to the luncheon that has a direct bearing. A driver hit an electrical pole cutting off both electricity and telephone service to corps and pointing out the need (in a minor way), for a generator at SA headquarters in case of a major disaster. Mrs. Alfred Castle has been talking of the need for sometime and contributions are welcome.

ON THE horizon: March is Red Cross Month and The Sardine Factory Restaurant will present a Red Cross Benefit Dinner at 7 p.m. March 10 with all proceeds going to the Monterey County chapter.

The fun part is that waiters will be celebrities — Henry Mello, Sam Farr, Marc del Piero, judges William Wunderlich and John Phillips and others. The four-course dinner with wines by Monterey County Wines is $50 each. Armanasco Public Relations in Monterey.

ANOTHER CARMELITE WINS an Academy Award nomination. Robert Benton for art direction of Who Framed Roger Rabbit which has six nominations. Robert and his wife, Carol, will attend the big night. Congratulations, Robert!

IF YOU ARE in the mood for a terrific Italian dinner "A Celebration In Rome" (and who isn't?), call Don Ferch at 633-5625 and reserve for the MP Chefs Association's "Chef of the Year Banquet" March 4th at the Hyatt Regency — $60, with dancing till midnight.

MASTERS OF FOOD and Wine is coming around for the third time. So mark your calendars now for April 11-16 at Highlands Inn. Prominent chefs and winemakers from Germany, Italy, France and the USA will lead a series of cooking classes, demos, vineyard and produce tours, along with gourmet luncheons, dinners and gala receptions.

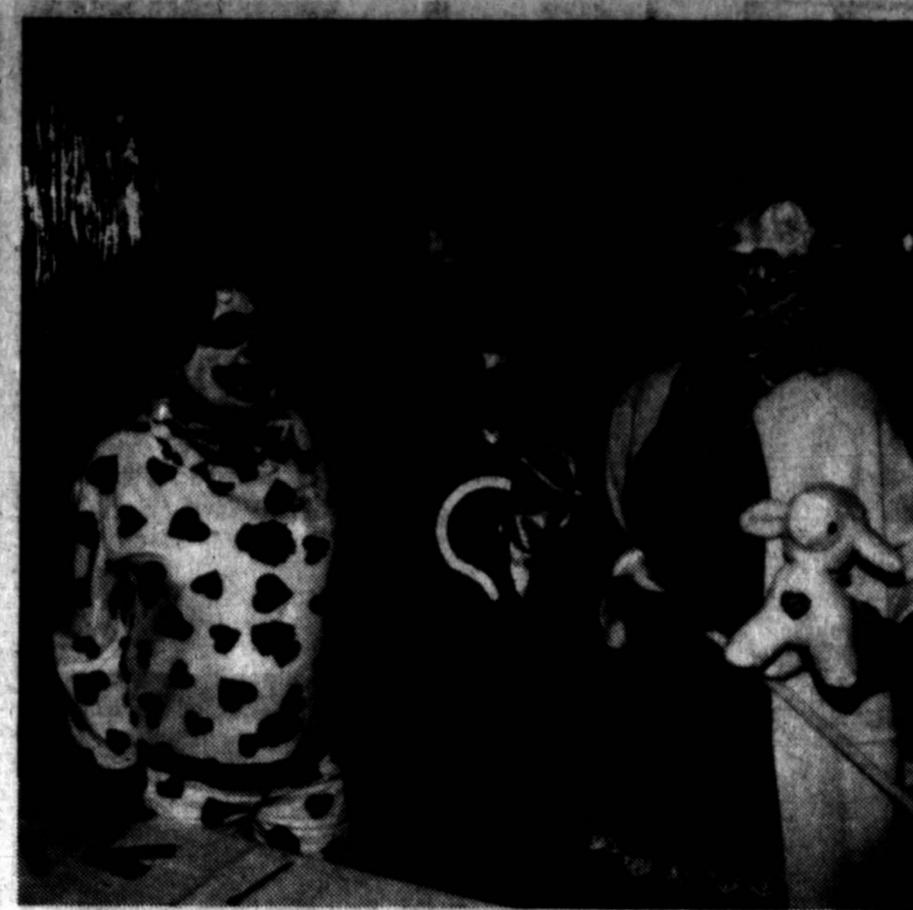

A hands-on cooking class by Barbara Kafka of New York and Brian Whitmer, chef at Highlands Inn, will also be held. The patriarch of France's wine industry, Vincent Leflaive, will make a rare appearance. Call the inn for your brochure and to reserve.

THE EXCITEMENT BUILDS for the Symphony Diamond Jubilee for bon vivant Morton Gould. One tent is for dining with musical-magical mirror table decor and a second tent in the LeVett's courtyard will be transparent so guests see the evening sky as well as spectacular lighting effects from within and without — giving the feeling as though guests are inside a diamond. Michael King, who did lighting for the re-opening of Carnegie Hall in the Big Apple, for the rock group Pink Floyd, and for the mega-production of Aida (with elephants and all), soon to tour Canada.

While dancing inside a diamond to the music of Dick LaSalle there will be a silent auction of wine, diamonds, a string of pearls just like those worn by Barbara Bush and a dinner at Tom and Sherrie McCulloughs. The jubilee menu is the creation of Bob Mikolitch of the Sheraton and is another kind of diamond with a surprise dessert.

CARMEL VALLEY OUTLOOK

By Grace Darcy

Honoring women

MARCH IS Women's History Month, and special events and ceremonies honoring women will be held throughout the nation and the world to celebrate women's incredible contributions to society. World focus is on International Women's Day, March 8, a day that symbolizes the worldwide struggle of working women for the basic needs of life.

International Women's Day is not listed on most calendars, although there are listings for Groundhog Day, St. Valentine's Day, Lincoln's Birthday, Washington's Birthday, St. Patrick's Day, and an assortment of religious holy days. Except for the sexist "pin-up" type calendars, women and their achievements are ignored.

International Women's Day began in 1908 when garment workers in New York were struggling for justice and social equality. According to Carmel Valley's Rosemary Matson, who recently wrote an excellent article about Women's History Month and International Women's Day for Free Mind, it was a crucial point in the history of the trade union and the women's rights movement in our country.

"Twenty-five thousand women and men came together to protest the long hours and the deplorable and dangerous working conditions in the factories. This is the first recorded instance of working women getting together over common concerns. Theirs was a real victory, for, in the strength of their numbers and in the dignity and independence of spirit, they came to realize their own women's power."

Ms. Matson terms International Women's Day "an important part of our heritage, making connections between women's rights, peace, the elimination of poverty, racism, and all forms of discrimination for all people all over the world."

Oddly, and although it is celebrated throughout the world, the United States has observed this important day only in the last dozen or so years. In 1975, when the United Nations launched the Decade of Women, International Women's Day was given official recognition.

Here in Carmel Valley, and prompted by Rosemary Matson's suggestion, several women-owned businesses are closing their doors on March 8 not only to celebrate International Women's Day, but to honor women everywhere. Kathie McCrary Loop and Teresa Sakasagawa, owners of Carmel Valley Business Service began the movement when they announced that they will close on March 8. Donna Mendenhall, owner of Village Center Bookkeeping and Tax Service, and Tina Placentia, owner of Tina Hair Design immediately joined them.

The idea was greeted warmly. Darlene Dunham, chairwoman of the Monterey County Commission on the Status of Women, called it "a wonderful idea, and as chair of the Commission on the Status of Women, I support it wholeheartedly." Ms. Dunham added that she "believes the commission will be willing to help spread the idea throughout the county."

AS PART of Women's History Month, the Commission on the Status of Women will celebrate Women's History Month by honoring 10 of Monterey County's most outstanding women at a special ceremony and reception at Hartnell College on Sunday, March 12, at 2 p.m. This is the third year that the commission has sponsored this important event, and the public is invited to attend. The names of the women selected will be listed in the Pine Cone, and we have it on good authority that several of the women selected are residents of the 5th Supervisorial District which, of course, includes Carmel Valley.

WHO SAYS Real Men don't eat quiche? Not only do Real Men eat quiche, but one of them even makes it ... Jonathan Langford did just that when he and Sharon Sandi held a Valentine Party at their lovely Carmel Valley home. Their guests included artists Mary and Fred Pomeroy and daughter Flora, also an artist, Hilary Nichols, D.C., Brad Calrow, sculptor Nicole Montalba, Judy and Dev MooreSong, Joseph Pagano, Paula Wainwright, Sabrina O'Jack, Lanny White, and yours truly. Sharon and Jonathan presented their guests with Valentines and lovely gifts, and the guests enjoyed the several quiches that Jonathan so beautifully created.

BELATED FEBRUARY birthday Greetings to Bill Kelly (Feb. 1), Jean Stekly and Betty Friedan (Feb. 4), Larry Busick (Feb. 7), Margaret Bonnington and Josh Campbell (Feb. 10), Susan B. Anthony (Feb. 15), Susan Estes (Feb. 25), and David Brown (Feb. 26).

Warmest March birthday greetings to David Whipple (March 1), Mary Pomeroy (March 3), Chris Cope (March 5), Gretchen Addison (March 7), Jan Davey and Kathy Little (March 11), Mike Thatcher and Don Trahan (March 14), Dave Ingraham (March 16), Sharon Campbell and Adrienne Meckel (March 17, along with St. Patrick), John Ford (March 19), Zachary Campbell (March 20), Christine Mack (March 23), Gloria Steinem (March 25), and Josh Brown (March 29).

HAPPY WEDDING anniversary greetings to Elizabeth and Bud Carlson (Feb. 25), Anne and Egon Werdelman (Feb. 27), Thelma and Richard Lee (March 12), and Irmgard and Gerry Feldon (March 27). Congratulations to all!

ON THE sand side, the valley recently lost three of its most loved citizens ... Min Bradley, Leander Crowe, and Ginnie Drew. They will be missed, and our lives are dimished by their leaving.

THANKS GO to Jeanelle and Roy Kaminske, two very special people, who recently donated $1,000 to the Good Egg Foundation for the second year in a row. The foundation, started last year by the Kaminskes, will provide seed money to valley residents who are giving of themselves to help others.

SEVERAL CARMEL Valley residents are participants in the dance review "Rock and Roll is Here to Stay" presently playing at the Tyler Street Theatre, Monterey, on Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. and on Sundays at 2 p.m. De Cabral is stage manager of the production, and Nina Laub donated the theater space. The review is a history of rock and roll through the '50s, '60s, and '70s, ending with the "Age of Aquarius." The show's director is the peninsula's outstanding choreographer, actor, singer, and dancer, Laura McEvoy. Additionally, talented Angel Cabral will perform with several other local youngsters at the Sunday matinees only. After its run at the Tyler Street Theatre, the review will move to Fort Ord for two weekends, and then on to the Wharf Theatre. Don't miss the fun ... and read the Pine Cone's calendar for dates and times.

Angel Cabral, a Carmel Valley favorite, is well on to her way to a career in showbiz. She's now a full-fledged member of the Screen Actors Guild (SAG) and ASTRA. She's doing a commercial for Monterey-Salinas Transit, and has several other exciting prospects on the horizon. Angel always takes with her the good wishes of many friends and neighbors.

MANY CARMEL Valley residents continue to be quite unhappy with the water management district and, somehow, the district does little to improve its image. Their latest mailing, a slick 4-by-9 pamphlet entitled "Water Rationing Program" cost a pretty penny, indeed. We learned from a water board official that printing the pamphlet cost 26 cents each, and 61,000 copies were printed and mailed. Using these numbers, printing costs were $15,860 and mailing costs, $7,320, for a total of $23,000 to the $30,000 the water board spent on their recent and much-resented "census," it would appear that $53,000 (approximately), of public money has been spent on frills that most valley residents feel are unnecessary. If the water management district felt it had to send something to its victims ... ah, excuse, its public (highly unlikely since everything about the board is reported in detail in the local press), three or four mimeographed pages would have served as well.

MAGNIFICENT peacocks often visit the Southbank Road/Hitchcock Canyon area. These beautiful birds are a delight to see, but are not too aware of traffic dangers. Some caring person(s) recently put up a sign (see photo), announcing a Peacock Crossing ... a kind and loving gesture.

A WORD of warning! The CV Community Chapel Guild will sponsor a bake sale on Saturday, March 18, at Donna Hamilton's Iron Kettle, White Oaks Plaza. The warning is because the incredibly delicious cakes, cookies, scones, nut breads, etc. are usually sold out quickly. Any reader with a sweet tooth (and isn't that just about all of us?), needs to get there early on! Hours: 11 a.m. - 3 p.m. The bake sale celebrates the 40th Anniversary of the CVCC, and proceeds will buy new robes for the choir. Marilyn Evans is in charge. Volunteers are welcome — 659-2809.

PLANS CONTINUE for this year's Monte Carlo Night (April 29), sponsored by the CV Community Youth Center. According to Exec Director Louise Riddell Kaufman, many fine prizes have been donated, with more to come ... The friends of C.G. Jung has an impressive list of guests and events this year. On March 3 at 7 p.m., the Friends will review When the Spirits Come Back, a book by Jungian analyst Janet O. Dallett, Ph.D. On Friday, March 10, also at 7 p.m., the Friends will discuss "A Process-Oriented Approach to 'Big' Dreams." Meetings are at All Saints Church in Carmel ... Buffie Johnson, artist, scholar, and author of Lady of the Beasts, will be at the Thunderbird on March 1 at 7:30 p.m. Do drop by!

TERESA SAKASEGAWA, co-owner of Carmel Valley Business Service, typed a notice to customers that the business will be closed March 8 in observance of International Women's Day. Co-owner Kathie McCrary Loop looks on approvingly.

JOURNEY OF CHILD WORKSHOP

TO BE HELD MARCH 4

The Community Human Services Foundation is hosting a special workshop, "The Journey of the Inner Child" with Wayne Kritsberg. The workshop is for adult children, co-dependents, adult victims of childhood abuse and anyone who grew up in a dysfunctional family system.

The workshop will take place Saturday, March 4 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Monterey Conference Center, Monterey. The cost is $60. For information, write or call Sharlene Hemingway, conference coordinator, 179 Sonoma Lane, Carmel, CA 93923, 624-7086 or the Community Human Services Foundation at 373-8825. A free, one-hour presentation will also take place on Friday, March 3 at 7:30 p.m. at the Pacific Grove Middle School, 835 Forest Ave. in Pacific Grove.

Find out what it means to be an "adult child" or co-dependent and how growing up in a dysfunctional family may affect many aspects of your life. Within each adult child and co-dependent there is a wounded child and a magical child. The wounded child is that part of the adult that was hurt and frightened as a result of growing up in a dysfunctional family. This wounded child lives in fear and pain. The magical child is the aspect of the adult which was untouched by the experience of growing up in a dysfunctional family. This magical inner child is filled with creative energy, love and is overflowing with joy. Recovery for the adult child and co-dependent takes place when the wounded child is healed and the magical child is set free. During this workshop, participants will learn to assess their inner resources and experiences necessary to self-discovery. They will learn techniques for healing the wounded child within. The process of acceptance and change will begin and participants will learn skills to assist them in moving from unhealthy, unsatisfying relationships to more gratifying, intimate relationships.

Wayne Kritsberg is a therapist, author and lecturer. He is nationally recognized for his pioneering work with adult children of alcoholics and co-dependents. He leads counselor training and personal growth workshops throughout the United States. Wayne is the author of the books The Adult Children of Alcoholics Syndrome: From Discovery to Recovery: Gifts for Personal Growth and Recovery: Gifts: Advanced Skills for Alcoholism Counselors.

SIERRA CLUB HONORS

LOCAL ENVIRONMENTALISTS

At its annual dinner Feb. 15, the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club awarded Honors to six people for their extraordinary efforts to preserve the quality of our central California environment.

Named as Environmental Citizen of the Year was David

Shonman, whose recent efforts on the restoration of Carmel Beach and with the Coastal Task Force were so outstanding.

The Public Service Award to an individual in local government who was especially sensitive to environmental issues went to Ruth Vreeland, a member of the Monterey City Council.

For excellence in environmental education Dr. Steven Webster, Education Director of the Monterey Bay Aquarium, was named.

And for admirable environmental news coverage Dick Heuer of the Carmel Valley Sun was commended.

For outstanding service within the Sierra Club, a joint award went to Larry Espinoza and Arthur Mitteldorf, co-chairs of the Chapter Conservation Committee. Together they have alerted and inspired a team of knowledgeable volunteers.

Chester Gadaire, chair of the Awards Committee, mastered the ceremonies and Kathy Juston, field coordinator for Sen. Henry Mello, presented the Senator's Certificate of Commendation, further honoring each awardee.

The event, which took place at the Santa Catalina School, also included entertainment by an environmental comedian, Charlie Varon, who demonstrated that beneath every crisis of our time flows an underground river of absurdity.

Christiansen is a student at California State University, Chico.

Paul D. Assum Jr., son of Paul D. Assum Sr. of Carmel Valley, has been promoted in the U.S. Army to the rank of specialist.

Church elects new readers

At a recent meeting of the members of First Church of Christ, Scientist in Carmel elected David Fluehr to serve as First Reader for a three-year term. In this position Fluehr will conduct the Sunday and Wednesday evening services at the church. He replaces Alan Legg.

Assisting him on Sundays as Second Reader will be Elizabeth Cole, elected at the same meeting.

The Church of Christ, Scientist consists entirely of laymen, and local members are democratically elected to fill all administrative posts and to conduct services.

The two elected Readers carry the main responsibility for the Sunday and Wednesday evening services of the church. Their primary duty is to read the Christian Science Lesson-Sermon on Sunday. This is a weekly compilation of related references from the Bible and the denominational textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy.

During the week, the same references serve as a Bible Lesson on a specific topic such as God, Man, Reality, Sacrament, or Matter. It is studied daily by Christian Scientists throughout the world. Read at the Sunday service, it becomes the sermon. Hymns, prayer, responsive reading by the congregation, and a solo constitute the rest of the service.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

Helping others is way of life for some

*Carmel Pine Cone
March 19, 1981*

Oh almighty and eternal God, our loving Father, Thou hast promised to remain forever with those who do what is just and right.

Help us to live by Thy admonition of service to others and bless this food to our use.

On the TV program 60 Minutes, there was a report of a voluntary group of New York Chicanos, blacks and whites, most of them blue-collar workers, who have formed an organization of concerned citizens calling themselves the "Guardian Angels." They wear red berets and sports jackets and ride the subways and public transportation, unarmed, to protect the riders from violence, robbers and muggers.

In the past few months they have made over 200 citizen arrests. Despite this success, they have been denounced by New York's Mayor Koch and the Police Department as a group of vigilantes. Their founder says, "These days nobody does nothin' for nothin'."

The Guardian Angels are unique because they are doing something for nothing, just as Rotarians are doing in every corner of the world.

Oh Lord, help us to go on helping others and help us to prove wrong those who say, "These days nobody does nothin' for nothin'." It just ain't so!

Amen.

meeting, conducted by the First Reader, includes a period when individual members of the congregation speak informally of experiences of Christian healing as understood in Christian Science.

COMMODORE SLOAT, NSDAR, AWARDS TEA

An awards ceremony and tea held recently by the Commodore Sloat Chapter, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution at the Community Center of Pacific Grove, honored eighth-grade recipients of the DAR Good Citizenship Medal and winners of the American History Essay Contest held annually in fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth-grades.

Mrs. Oliver E. Wood, chairman, called forward the individual eighth-graders each accompanied by a school sponsor who gave a short biography of the student indicating the qualities of honor, service, courage, leadership and patriotism found in that student which qualified him/her to receive the DAR Good Citizenship Medal. Many parents were also present for the occasion.

Receiving accolades were Victoria Madriaga and Edith Marquez from All Saints Day School; Jeff Ellis from Briarcliff Academy; Lindsay Webb from Carmel Middle School; Wendy Shackelford from Fitch Middle School, Janell Petalzer from Junipero Serra; Jane Lee from Los Arboles; Jennifer Kruzel, Pacific Grove Middle School; Jodice Garnett, San Carlos School; Caroline Griffiths, Santa Catalina Lower School; Rachel Giarratano, Walter Colton; Kristopher Martin, The York School.

Mrs. Kenneth Owen, chairman of the American History Essay Contest, presented Certificates of Award to Rebecca Lynn Hill, Santa Catalina fifth-grader; Micah Lande, seventh-grader from Carmel Middle School; and Moon Ko, eighth-grader from Pacific Grove Middle School.

The topic this year for all schools throughout the country was "My Favorite Patriot of the American Revolution (1775-1783)." In addition to the certificates, Rebecca Lynn and Micah were given the book Pillars of Patriotism, and Moon, as overall winner, received a cash award. These essays are 300-500 words long and are undertaken by the students over and above their regular school work.

Mrs. Richard F. Bly, tea chairman, invited members and guests to partake of the refreshments supplied by members. A bouquet of red, white and blue fresh flowers arranged by new member Mrs. Carl A. Hering complemented the silver tea service and crystal punch bowl at either end of the refreshment table.

Prior to the awards ceremonies, members had participated in a regular business meeting which concluded with the annual memorial service conducted by chapter chaplain Mrs. J. Gerald Chaney honoring members deceased over the past year.

Laiolo, who captained both the Carmel High and Monterey Peninsula College basketball squads before finishing his career at UC-Santa Barbara has been a Nashville resident and Vandy fan since 1981.

He has written songs for many country artists, including The Kendalls, The Glaser Brothers, Gene Cotton, and Joe Sun. He also wrote the 1985 Vern Gosdin hit I Know The Way To You By Heart, which made the Country Top 10.

Money

The bird is back

By Clyde Klaumann

WELCOME to the Sandpiper. This is Carmel High School's student newspaper. Thanks to Mr. Bill Brown, publisher of the Pine Cone, and a donation from the Associated Student Body, we will be printing a new issue of the Sandpiper every month. The Sandpiper, under the direction of Sue Williams-Pierik, is made up of Carmel High students with an interest in writing, and those who just have something to say. We hope you enjoy our paper, and the articles we write. We would enjoy any comments you have about our paper, and hope you will continue reading our newspaper.

Lost Letter

WALKING down the hall this letter was found. It seems very important, so I thought it should be printed.

—Yvette Lyon

Buddy—

You're so stoaked. HE called you. He is way fine and cool. You're on it. Well, about me. He doesn't even know I exist. I sent him roses in his class for Valentine's Day, but he didn't even thank me. I guess Saturday night didn't mean anything. What am I going to do?!

I hear there's a raging party this weekend. Wanna go shopping for a new outfit for the party? We'll get ready at my house. Call me tonight.

—Luv, me

Money shouldn't matter

By Anthony Boyd

I AM so frustrated by the impact of money. Money is paper. Paper has never hurt so many before. It keeps the poor poor, while making the rich feel rich.

I'm rich compared to the rest of the world. It feels so good to have money, and yet I am upset that I need it. I am ashamed. I don't give it to the poor who truly need it more than I. What kind of statement is our money hungry society making throughout the world?

I don't eat my apples. Abdon, Rahim and I have been known to lob them through the air, aiming for the garbage can, and on impact they become inedible. If there was a

Strang Happenings around CHS

By Jade Slate and Hilary Humphrey

SO, YOU think Carmel is a pretty boring school? Wrong! When you start digging around, you can find some pretty funny happenings about our school.

Try for one, the time Mrs. Harnish wore two different size and color shoes and didn't notice until lunch. The next day, all the teachers, as a joke, wore mismatched shoes. Her excuse was that her closet was dark!

How about in 1979, when the seniors tried to sell the school under the principal's name in The Herald. This was a senior prank that almost made it, but not quite. Instead, the students stole real-estate signs from around the peninsula and put them in front of the school. Would anyone like to buy our get away resort?

A few years back, someone actually came to school during a holiday, and wondered where everyone was. Some people sure love school!

Not this year, but a while ago, a freshman ball player wasn't paying quite enough attention to the game and was knocked out by a stray fly ball. Keep your eyes open next time bud!

It seems last year, a certain Mr. Gunderson came back to school after a three day weekend to find a huge pile of horse manure steaming in the hot sun in the middle of his office. Needless to say, the entire office building kept its windows open for the next few days.

"79" seems to have been a pretty good year for strange happenings. A CHS basketball player at Seaside accidentally mooned all the spectators at the game when taking off his warm up sweats. He hadn't realized what he'd done and bounded off into the game with only a jock strap on. A bit chilly, I would say!

This is only some of the odd trivia that goes around Carmel High. Who knows, maybe the things you and I have done will go down in the "Strange Happenings Hall of Fame."

For the Sandpiper

By Matt Snowden

IN THIS space, I could write about absolutely anything. For instance, I could write about trendy shoes, weather patterns, third world starvation, deforestation, the latest soap opera scoop, what the Joneses just bought, the President's budget outline, the NBA All-Star game, the lack of sufficient swell this winter, love, hate, trouble in Afghanistan, english muffins, the '89 Mercedes, government oppression in Romania, the Federal Deficit, Zepplin, parking problems, call-waiting, marriage, divorce, pregnancy, abortion, life, death, sailing on the bay, relationships, homework, dirty closets, cracked nails, orcas, parties, homeless people, or I could write about how beautiful the sunset was last night.

Do any of these things matter to you? Which things are most important and relevant to you? Don't tell me, tell yourself!

(NOTE: Tony's got dibs on writing about dirty closets!)

Nuclear Destruction

(And other fun life-threatening situations)

By Kyle Zook

HERE, LET'S talk about some issue that no one ever talks about anymore. How about nuclear? Armageddon?

Ha, see, I knew you'd forgotten all about it.

Well, let's think about this for a moment. Did you ever hear about Hiroshima? That was child's play compared to the 1000 times more powerful weapons we have now. You realize that the U.S. and U.S.S.R. have the capability to destroy the world five times over.

If we were ever in a nuclear war, there wouldn't be a safe place on this planet.

Face it, folks, this is kind of serious.

Well, the point is: you don't have to sit there on your duffs while the politicians chatter back and forth. Oh, I know, your parents keep telling you that you don't have any rights. Really, you're just a kid. However, that isn't true, and you know it. There's a lot you can do.

After all, this is your planet, isn't it?

After all the politicians around are dead and gone, you'll still be here, playing hot potato with a planet on the brink of destruction, along with the other countries. So would you like to live in a world free of the threat of nuclear holocaust?

You've got to believe that you can really make a difference in the world. That part's true, you can. Next, write our congressman, Leon Panetta, at the House of Representatives, Washington D.C., 20515.

Better yet, write the President, George Bush himself. Straighten out a few things with the top man, tell 'em what's what. Just address it to the White House, Washington D.C., 20515. Your letter will either get to him, his aides, or the C.I.A. But don't let that stop you.

In return for your letters, you get a nifty personalized note sent back to you with an autograph. The note will probably detail all the "thorough" steps the president is taking to make sure nuclear armageddon never happens.

If enough people write, perhaps someone in that nice, white, house will sit up and listen. You never know until you try.

—Written by Kyle Zook, a true conservative at heart.

SADIE HAWKINS

By Yvette Lyon

IT'S STRANGE how girls are reacting to this dance. Stress, anxiety, constant whispering and giggling. Now, they appreciate what guys go through when they ask a girl to a dance. But, not enough to do this all the time.

You get all pumped up to ask HIM. Your girlfriends the class before tell you what to say, how to say it, that you look fine and that of course he'll say yes. How do they know?

So, after fifty-five minutes preparing for this moment, it's over (in 55 seconds). You walk up to him, mumble something about the weather being nice, and then you hit him with it. "Wanna go to Sadie's?" The few seconds it takes for him to answer seems like an eternity. Finally, he smiles at you and says, "Yes!"

Walking up to your friends, you began to scream and plan what you will all do that night. See, it's not that bad.

So, girls you have one day left. Ask your girlfriends for support and ask HIM. You know he's waiting for you, too. But then again, how do I know?

World lit make-up essay

By Jon Gonzalez

AFTER World War 2, America began a quick climb to the top of the free world. She assumed the role of world leadership, founded in secure economic and military strength. Now at the top of the heap, America has lost its long-range perspective and has begun to slip from the top.

America has completely forgotten the cold, hard fact that we have a finite amount of oil in the world. Alternate energy sources, such as solar power, nuclear fusion, and space based satellites have been forgotten in the glut of oil and gasoline.

Another way America has lost its perspective is shown by the way that traditional values have fallen apart. Are such things as one-parent families, abortion, suicide, and AIDS the result of a "liberation" period of the sixties and 70's or a result of America forgetting its roots and living for the present?

This country has lost its common sense. Fifty years ago, people in this country would have been aghast to learn that 23 million fetuses have been destroyed. Now, abortion is a common fact of life.

Men and women, in search for their identity, have rejected long standing rules of family in this nation. The result seems to be a discontented generation of youth who cannot identify with strong father or mother figures as a role model. Is this worth whatever small degree of freedom we might gain?

The sexual revolution is further proof of that statement. Unable to look into the future, an entire nation became "liberated" and opened a Pandora's box of pregnancy, sexual disease, pornography, and the breakup of thousands of marriages.

It would seem that our nation is like a successful music artist. After achieving success and power beyond measure, this country has turned to many things to try and handle that success. It would seem, like many great music stars of our day, that we are headed for an overdose.

The grass would be greener if someone planted it

By Anthony Boyd

WOULDN'T it be cool if we could go to school to learn? To be stimulated enough to think for ourselves? For that matter, wouldn't it be nice to be allowed to think for ourselves?

I'm tired of a biased education. I'm sick and tired of trying to make decisions with only half the information. The government leading us, the A.C.L.U., and the Christians, they're all confused. And they're confusing me.

The A.C.L.U. says practicing religion in society is illegal. Religious people are crying persecution. The Moral Majority says creationism must be taught in schools. Activists are screaming that that would be federal sponsoring of a single religion.

We need a school where we can get info on evolutionism, creationism, theism, fiat, and other theories on our existence as well. We need to be able to discuss. It is necessary to throw ideas and thoughts around in order to learn.

Maybe then, through talking to teachers, parents, friends, and ourselves, through reading, thinking, and investigation we can learn what we believe. And understand why.

As it stands, it's like the great Pepsi vs. Coke war. Or the equivalent of the Bush vs. Dukakis campaign. Mudslinging thrown in outright anger is everywhere, and those who don't care one way or the other are truly fed up. I don't blame them.

I understand that everyone thinks they're right. If they are, then let us decide that. It's like in trigonometry. Some students who are visually oriented find the side of a triangle by graphing. Others take the shortcut and use Pythagoras. Both ways work. But we couldn't tell which method worked best for us until we were shown both of them. And we're learning more ways, still.

The only way to learn is to know everything about what you're doing and then do it the best way possible. If you make a mistake, you have all your other options to back you up. If you get it right, you can appreciate all the other options and explore them with the assurance that your method will support you.

I want an education, and if a teacher pushes a view without showing others, I'm not getting one. I want to communicate, not fight and bicker. I want to be informed and decide, not conform to the only view being presented. The adults of the world should trust their theories enough to let them stand up to other ideas. And they should trust us enough to let us decide for ourselves.

Color images freeze hummingbirds in flight

By ANNE PAPINEAU

ELECTRIC-HUED hummingbirds that tease with their seconds-short visits have been frozen for closer human observation by the cameras of Tony Keppelman. The results of his efforts are assembled in Hummingbirds, a book recently published by the New York Graphic Society.

Keppelman relied on new technology and old-fashioned luck to complete his photographic essay on the tiny creatures.

"I developed the system myself with Jim Mayer of Mayer Electronics in Monterey. It had been done before — I just took a method I read about and sophisticated it further," Keppelman explained.

Working in both Arizona and New York State, the lensman lured hummingbirds with a standard sugar-water feeder.

"They flew into my set-up. There's a beam of light they fly into and when they do — the camera and lights are set off," he said.

The result: a 12-by-12-inch full color volume containing 37 portraits of the ruby-throated, broad-billed, black-chinned, violet-crowned and others of the 13 species of hummingbird that nest in this country.

Keppelman will sign his new book during a reception set 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. Saturday, March 4 at the Thunderbird Bookshop in the Barnyard, Carmel.

Although Keppelman has made his home in Burlington, Vt., for 13 years, he and his family have close ties to the Monterey Peninsula.

"My father launched the Pacific Grove Tribune," recalled Keppelman, who moved to the peninsula at age 3 in 1947. "We settled in the Monterey Peninsula Country Club area, and I grew up there. When I was 7 my father sold the paper and the whole family moved to Antigua in the West Indies."

Three years later, they were back on the peninsula.

Keppelman describes his life as "very interesting." He graduated from Robert Louis Stevenson School, and then studied music composition at five different colleges — acquiring an education but no degree.

He returned to the Monterey Peninsula, and found that he was skillful at carpentry and electronics. He pursued both.

Keppelman said that he never really studied photography formally. He learned it "by osmosis."

A RIVOLI (Magnificent) Hummingbird is captured by the stroboscopic camera system devised by Tony Keppelman. Keppelman brings "the life force" of the hummingbird to his book of color photographs, Hum- ingbirds, published by the New York Graphic Society. A booksigning and reception are set Saturday, March 4 at the Thunderbird Bookshop.

"My father was a journalist and photographer and I remember the darkroom from a very early age. I got my little Brownie Hawkeye at age 7," Keppelman recalled.

"I knew Ansel Adams and his wife and I'd talk to them about my work. Sometimes I went to Ansel with a technical question. The same was true of some other local photographers. I spoke to Al Weber, Morley Baer, Wynn Bullock and even Brett Weston to some extent. I spent a lifetime growing up around these people. I was highly influenced by Edward Weston's work."

For Hummingbirds, Keppelman noted that his tiny, bright-feathered subjects "were not captured or manipulated in any way. I didn't want any branches or anything in the way. I wanted to isolate them."

He set up a neutrally colored background curtain in the gardens where he worked. This way, each "hummer" is captured in precise detail.

"The book is about the energy of them, the life-force they manifest," he added.

As an artist who has worked in both mediums, Keppelman discovered a link between music and photography.

"There's a very strong connection," he pointed out. "They're both very involved with beauty and movement and stillness. They're both very connected to a sense of reality. Music is a very pure form and very pure language. Photography has this very strong link to the physical universe. It's the only way we have of recording reality. It's very primal — we can feel it through our beings. Both have to do with my passion with what is real and what is illusionary."

Keppelman's "interesting life" is in fact a multi-faceted one. He has also assembled a collection of portraits that he made at Esalen and in Vermont which he hopes to develop into a book called Intimacy and Courage.

"It's a book of portraits about the innate desire for intimacy in human beings," he noted.

"It's an interesting life I've had," Keppelman quipped. "I've been a professional potter. I have inventions. I've taught music and photography and auto mechanics. I've had a life in electronics and I've been a carpenter, a professional photographer and a musician."

Hardly content to let that self-definition rest, Keppelman has further branched out and now teaches classes "to help people live in the spiritual side of themselves. I'm now a hands-on healer."

For additional information about Saturday's reception for Hummingbirds, contact the Thunderbird Bookshop at 624-1803.

JAZZ TIDES

By John Detro

Impossibly hip implications

JIMMY LYONS and Don Barksdale weaned us away from R&B via their jazz radio shows. But whatever sense of sartorial style we had — we street boys of the East Oakland flatlands — came from another man.

After school jobs didn't pay much so Rojo and I put our coinage together toward a particular purchase. We stood about equal in the gang's explicit pecking order (I could fight better but he was a junior varsity running back); natural selection made us best friends. We argued rarely and always over the same issue — who'd enter the Friday night dance wearing our Mister B shirt with its flared collar and whole world of impossibly hip implications.

We didn't know then that master vocalist Billy Eckstine had fronted maybe the greatest big band in jazz history (1944-47). We heard his later records and caught him live at Civic Auditorium with a group called the George Shearing Quintet. This is real stuff — how wild kids, operating pretty much apart from parental dicta, enter a culture.

Mister B defined cool. It will be good to see him here and say exactly that.

The first jazz column I ever wrote (for a neighborhood weekly more than three decades back) took Dizzy Gillespie as its massive subject. It will be good to see him here and say exactly that.

Right. Giants on the scene. Freddie Hubbard, Bill Holman, Bobby Hutcherson and Monte Alexander too. Jimmy says some contracts have come back signed, and all will be part of Monterey Jazz Festival in September (9/15-16-17).

MJF honcho Lyons: "Billy Eckstine will bring his pianist — Bobby Tucker — and sing on the Sunday night program. Diz agreed to send three charts for the High School All-Stars to learn; he'll work with the kids on Sunday afternoon and then pop in on Sunday evening as the spirit moves."

Jimmy reveals the Saturday night arena lineup as well — Swing Twilight Orchestra from Japan (a big hit in the fairgrounds Night Club last year), pianist Monte Alexander's trio (with Monte doing respectful vocal covers of Nat Cole), the Freddie Hubbard unit plus special guest Bobby Hutcherson, eastern vocal group Mad Romance (tight and attractive on their demo), the new Bill Holman Big Band.

Meanwhile, MJF's 19th annual California High School Jazz Competition has been slated April 28-29-30 at the same fairgrounds. Audition tapes will be judged by jazz educators Leon Breeden, Don Jacoby and Jim Riggs of North Texas State University. Only the finalists (10 big bands and five combos) will cook here. All-Star candidates and jazz choir finalists also will undergo scrutiny of gathered pros.

The free public concert by judges will be offered on the Friday night (4/28) in the Monterey Room. Players: MJF Music Director Bill Berry on trumpet, Harvey Wainapel with Herman Riley and Jack Nimitz (saxophones), George Bohanon (trombone), pianist Tee Carson, Bruce Forman (guitar), Larry Grenadier (bass), drummer Vince Lateano. Vocal judges — localite Bob Morse of Hi Lo's fame, Gail Dobson, Madeline Eastman. More on all this at the right time.

Jimmy's the first guest on a new, hour-long interview show hosted by Johnny Adams and yours truly over KRML Radio. He talks about festival history and such major figures as Woody Herman, Diz, Stan Kenton, the late jazz critic Ralph Gleason. Jazz Forum kicks off its run at two o'clock Sunday afternoon (3/5).

Not incidentally, Don Barksdale has been inducted into its Hall of Fame by the San Francisco Bay Area Blues Society. Honored at the same celebration: Johnny Otis, Brownie McGhee, Bob Geddins, Sugar Pie DeSanto, Johnny Hartsman.

ANOTHER FESTIVAL — Dixieland Monterey

1989 — stands ready to erupt like Bourbon Street partytime nights. The full schedule commences Friday (3/3) and whirls through Sunday.

Best possible tip: follow the sounds. Organizers of the ninth annual bash say that 20 bands will play "in continuous rotation" at several cabaret locations. Downtown Monterey. Fisherman's Wharf. Some highlights:

— The yearly Dixieland Jubilator's Parade starts downtown at 10 a.m. Saturday.

— Local trumpet man Joe Ingram again hosts Jam Cabaret. The open session will jump "all weekend long" in the Sheraton's Three Flags Restaurant.

— Sunday morning spirituals. This free songfest will happen in the Conference Center. Everyone invited starting at nine o'clock.

— The band Hot Cotton plans a slide show. Described as "a fun-filled excursion through musical history."

Other Dixieland aggregations signed on: Papa Jake and the Abalone Stompers, Beverly Hills Unlisted, Hogin's Heroes, Nightblooming Jazzmen, Churchill Street, Your Father's Mustache, Natural Gas, South Frisco, California Express, Fulton Street, Chicago Six, Tuleburg, Dixieland Express, Do Wah Street Irregulars, Golden Eagles, Mardi Gras.

All-event badges ($35 apiece) may be purchased at Coast Savings outposts. Single badges cost $20 each for Saturday or $10 for Friday and Sunday. Dixieland Hot Line — 443-5260.

Elsewhere, the Bill Graham organization announces an International Dixieland Jazz Festival on May 21 at Shoreline Amphitheater. The 16th annual Sacramento Dixieland Jubilee opens just five days later.

THE OSCAR process showed bedrock immaturity when Clint Eastwood's Bird flick drew a single and token nomination: best sound. Voters obviously weren't ready for a serious treatment of interracial marriage within the jazz context. (And some hacks got to slap at the kneecaps of a myth-sized figure.)

A troubling parallel emerges. The first book of jazz criticism came back at us many years ago from France. It was the Foreign Press Association that gave Clint a 1989 Golden Globe as best director. Draw your own conclusions.

Hum a Dixie melody during Monterey celebration

By MAC McDONALD

ON ALMOST any given night in New Orleans a jazz fan can walk into literally dozens of nightclubs and get a hearty serving of toe-tapping Dixieland along with their steaming bowls of gumbo.

Downtown Monterey will turn into its own version of the Big Easy's French Quarter when the ninth annual Dixieland blows into town Friday through Sunday, March 3-5. The action all takes place within easy walking distance of each other at eight locations, with 17 Dixieland bands stompin' and struttin' past midnight.

The action starts at 6:30 p.m. Friday, 10:30 a.m. Saturday and 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

The annual Jubilator's Parade starts at 10 a.m. Saturday downtown, with other special events including the "Jam Cab" — open jam sessions — at the Monterey Sheraton's Three Flags Restaurant, and the ever-popular Sunday Spiritual, which because of its popularity, has been moved to the Monterey Conference Center, with a 9 a.m. start. It's free and open to the public.

The festival's lineup features a little old and a little new, some new bands and some well-known names, including: Hot Cotton, Beverly Hills Unlisted, Hogin's Heroes, Nightblooming Jazzmen, Churchill Street, Your Father's Mustache, Natural Gas, South Frisco, Jake Stock and the Abalone Stompers, California Express, Fulton Street, Classic Jass Band, Tuleburg, Dixieland Express, Golden Eagles, Mardi Gras and Monterey's own Do Do Wah Street Irregulars.

"Most music styles are subject to vanish in the night as tastes change, but Dixieland jazz seems to have a resilience all its own," says Ed Greco, clarinetist for the Do Do Wah Street band and one of the festival's organizers.

Venues are all located at the waterfront end of downtown Monterey and include the spacious confines of the De Anza and Sheraton ballrooms to more intimate clubs such as the Franklin Street Bar & Grill and Wharfside on the wharf.

Other locations include Red Snapper, California's First Theatre, Tony's, I. Layton's, Haggis's and the Bonsai Room at the Doubletree. Some venues even offer food, drink and dancing to go with the jazz.

Headquarters of the festival will be located this year in two places, at the Doubletree and Sheraton hotels.

Since admission is not available at the door of each venue, fans should purchase their festival badges at Dixieland Registration Center at the Doubletree. Badges allow fans to attend events at their leisure throughout the weekend. All-event badges for the entire weekend are $35, with a limited number of single-day badges also available, $10 each for Friday and Sunday and $20 for Saturday.

For more information call the special Dixieland Hotline at 443-5260.

Right You Are (If You Think You Are)

Luigi Pirandello's sly look at gossip in a small Italian town, Right You Are (If You Think You Are) explores what a rising tide of inquisitiveness does to the objects of the town's nosiness. The play is brought to life by The Staff Players Repertory Company at the Indoor Forest Theater in Carmel.

Pirandello was years ahead of his contemporaries in his understanding of the observer's point of view. The notion of Total Objectivity seemed a myth to him. Right You Are... carries the audience with the actors into a close look at how much we really know about one another.

Sister Mary Ignatius Explains It All for You

Christopher Durang's satire of organized religion, Sister Mary Ignatius Explains It All for You, will have its Central Coast premiere Saturday, March 4 at the GroveMont Theater. Mindy Stock portrays Sister Mary, a slightly "round-the-bend" nun who delivers charmingly ghoulish lectures on Catholicism to her parochial school students. Devised as no mere diatribe against the church, Sister Mary is instead a character who conveys the insidious ways any large organization spreads its dogmatic views. Durang has produced a play which some view as hilarious, multi-layered and disturbing.

The production is directed by Stephen Moorer and also features Dorian Ellis, Mickie Mosley Braun, Kevin Hanstick, Jim Sutty and Luke Stock.

Discount previews are set at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, March 2-3. Saturday's 8 p.m. gala opening will feature a post-show wine and refreshment reception with the performers. There will also be a matinee at 2 p.m. Sunday, March 5.

BOTH LANDED AT SAME SPOT

The two parties which made Monterey Bay known and later made Monterey exist both came ashore on the same part of the beach, just south of the Presidio of Monterey on Pacific St., in present-day Monterey. They were groups led by Sebastian Vizcaino in 1602 and Fr. Junipero Serra in 1770. A monument marks the location.

Ticket prices are Thursdays and Sundays are $8.50 general and $7 for students, senior citizens and the military. Tickets on Fridays and Saturdays are $9.50 general and $8 for students, seniors and the military.

The theater is at 320 Hoffman, between Lightfoot and Hawthorne, in New Monterey. For advance tickets, call 649-5561. For reservations, call 649-6852.

My Fair Sheriff

The Carmel Foundation's annual Revue and Ice Cream Social will reflect the Old West this year. Senior members of the foundation will perform songs, dance and "unprecedented forms of entertainment," according to the press release.

Directed by Carmel Foundation members Iris and Hal Harris, My Fair Sheriff is a rollicking Country-Western musical, featuring such songs as "The Tennessee Waltz," "Tumbling Tumbleweeds," "Cool Water" and many others. These songs are united by a plot that includes a villain (Hector DeSmet), a stalwart sheriff (Camilie Templeton), and a saloon keeper (Roy Cole) who is finagled into transforming his premises into a church meeting house.

My Fair Sheriff will play at 2 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, March 4-5, 11-12, and 18-19. Ice cream with homemade topping will be served family-style at 2 p.m. The show commences shortly thereafter in the Carmel Foundation, located at Lincoln and Eighth in Carmel. Tickets for both ice cream and the show are $4.

Reservations are necessary as seating is limited. For tickets, call the foundation at 624-1588, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Stunning Rutman recital; commendable 'The Medium'

THE APPEARANCE of pianist Neil Rutman on the Carmel Music Society series on Saturday, Feb. 25, must have been very gratifying to those who heard him some 12 years ago, when he won that organization's competition. When everything gets moving, he is a very exciting pianist.

From a rather pedestrian opening, Rutman's concert built to a real blockbuster of a finale: a solo piano version of Ravel's popular orchestral work, La Valse. This version was apparently done by Ravel, initially to help out a conductor. (An interesting reversal, since we are accustomed to hearing Ravel's orchestrations of piano works, his own and others'.)

The work was extraordinarily difficult, including loud glissandi that must have left a little trail of blood on the keyboard. Rutman not only made it look playable, he really seemed to be enjoying himself. The various orchestral parts were handled with amazing subtlety. It was a stunning performance.

Preceding that was Odeon, Tango Brasileiro by the Brazilian Ernesto Nazareth (1863-1934). In a rondo-like form, which featured Latin rhythms, lots of seventh chords, and a sharply downward melodic line, its primary purpose seemed to be to separate the Franck and Ravel works.

The second half of the program opened with Prelude, Fugue and Variation, Op. 18, of Franck, and it was with this piece that Rutman began to display his gifts. The wandering, haunting quality of the Prelude was beautifully conveyed. Fugue is not a style which is really amenable to the late 19th century language, but it didn't stop Franck from writing them. He wrote wonderful organ works, and the thickness characteristic of them carries over into his piano music. Rutman kept it as clear as is humanly possible, and it was effective. He ran into trouble only when the music got very soft, for his tone lost focus.

The first half of the program was simply not on the same plane. The Mozart Sonata, K. 311, never really got anywhere, Rutman was sensitive to the sound of Mozart, crisp and without excessive dynamic change, but he failed to make it interesting.

Schubert's Fantasy in C major, "The Wanderer," is a big, showy piece, not the sort of thing Schubert does best. Rutman played it well technically, but was not able to overcome the inherent weakness of the piece.

At this moment, it seems Rutman's gifts lie primarily in late 19th and early 20th century music, and he ought to exploit them. He commands a brilliant technique, an excellent range of sound and a good intuition for this repertoire.

THE MONTEREY Opera Association produced "The Medium," by Gian Carlo Menotti last weekend only at the Mission Ranch in Carmel. This new organization hopes to promote interest in opera on the peninsula, including in the public schools. This is certainly a worthy goal, and one can only wish them well.

Menotti's compelling story is almost fool-proof on stage; led by Jane Zambory as Madame Flora, the cast managed the necessary dramatic intensity. Vocally, however, one wished for more authority.

Barney Hulse provided good musical support at the console of the mighty synthesizer. It is greatly to be hoped that this "instrument" will not be a permanent fixture of the MOA. A single piano would be far more expressive. Some of the synthesized sounds are inherently funny, and it can considerably distract from the stage action when these occur.

The company has far to go, but it is a worthy endeavor and deserving of support.

ART NOTES

By Sam Colburn

The third dimension

PERHAPS THE greatest involvement of the artist in drawing, painting or sculpture has been space. The sculptor has perhaps the greatest problem. He has that third dimension to consider. In the School of the Academy, which happily came to an end a number of years ago, there was not much thought given to the backside of many sculptures. This was particularly true with portraits. After all, what can you do with the back of a head. Well, Epstein gave an idea of the possibilities.

In painting, the picture area was beautifully defined by Cezanne, who said of a successful work, that if you changed one part you would have to change the whole surface. That is the strictest dictum every mouthed by any artist.

The Carmel Art Association, until March 1, showed the work of three artists in the Beardsley Gallery. They are Tim Sloan, Susan Reith and Jane Goode. Tim is working in pastel. His color is soft and sensual, which I guess is a characteristic of the medium. "Pastel Dream" is a picture that glows because the warms and cools work that way. "The Scarlett Pillow" has a gleaming quality. His use of space is excellent as in "Jaime," and "Still Life." "Jazz Portrait" is loose, and the most nebulous of the works. But possibly indicates a new direction.

Susan Reith showed several oils. Her color is interesting as in "Girl in Polka Dotted Skirt." There is a certain flatness which holds the subject matter on one plane. "Seated Woman" has a splendid use of warm and cool with just a slight bit of patterning to relieve the flat areas.

Jane Goode exhibited oils. "Pas De Deux" is a fine painting of two boats with the reflections of the boats in the water as counterpoint. Her "Garden Path—Giverny" has a shimmering quality.

Bob Blaisdell has been showing in the hallways, and I am sorry to be late with this review. His watercolors of pieces of cloth are very delicate, but achieve form and feeling. He also works with small squares of color. I feel that his imagery is unusual.

We are not far into the new year, but there are indications of counter-schlock here on the peninsula. One is the Gallery Seven on 17th Avenue in Pacific Grove, and another is James Ogles's collection of Carmel galleries.

JAZZ TIDES

Forest Whitaker (playing Charles Parker) won best actor honors at Cannes. The New York Film Critics called Diane Venora (Chan Parker) this year's finest supporting actress. His work was gripping; she achieved a rare and nervy radiance. The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences simply loses credibility by ignoring them.

The Oscar rites are, at best, quirky. For the record, it's clear today that the jazz-loving Eastwood started a roll.

He convinced Warner Brothers to back Round Midnight. Then came Clint's filmic biography of Bird Parker.

George Benson says he'll play Wes Montgomery in another jazz bio. Working title: Boss Guitar.

Actors Nicholas Cage and Matthew Modine now have been offered the respective roles of Gene Krupa and Benny Goodman in an Elliot Kastner project called Hot Men. Their agent says the two are "thinking about" participation in the Swing Era tale.

Ray Charles Jr. announces that he'll produce The Ray Charles Story in cooperation with Taylor Hackford's New Visions Pictures. "Offers have been made to various directors. We'll likely focus on the first 16-18 years of the career."

Director Debbie Allen has purchased screen rights to the novel Wedding Band. The story details an interracial love affair. Selective blindness never makes the truth go away.

NOTEBOOK CHUNKS:

• Even then there was a special brightness and tenacity about her. The young jazz singer worked San Francisco's old Purple Onion in the '50s. In time she became known worldwide as the writer and educator Maya Angelou.

Miss Angelou will appear at Santa Catalina School on Friday night (3/3). Admission's free and seating limited—you can shoot for reservations by calling 649-1432. Program starts at eight o'clock.

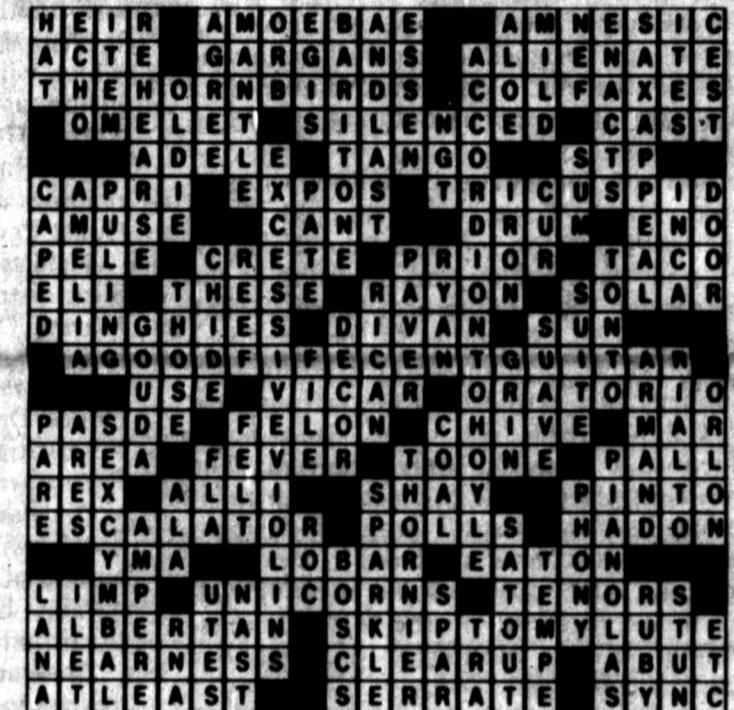

She's also an actress, producer, editor, wondrous lecturer—and songwriter. One tune on Roberta Flack's new album (her first release in five years) was collaborated upon by Miss Angelou and Miss Flack.

• At the Monterey Bay Club: singer Ronnie Barnes (3/3-4). Full schedule for March may be picked up there now.

• Kuumbwa Jazz Center in Santa Cruz presents vocalist Sheila Jordan with bassist Harvie Swartz on Monday night (3/6). It's $11 per; eight o'clock kick. Center Stage Ticketing.

• Kenny and pianist Bob Phillips play through Jazz Brunch on Sundays (12:30-2:30) at Silver Jones Restaurant in The Barnyard.
